

Treating a Case Actively.
I was once sent for, in great haste, to attend a gentleman of respectable position, who was a day or two from leaving for the coast. He had been in his room, lying on his back, for several days.
On arriving at the house, I found Mr. H. in great distress of mind.
"What is the matter with you, Mr. H.?" I asked.
"I am afraid it is nothing," he replied, "I have been lying on my back for several days, and I am not able to get up."
I examined his chest and found that it was not the lungs that were affected, but the stomach.
I administered a cathartic, and the patient improved.
