Admitting, however, the correctness of the estimates, it is apparent the State is placed in a condition no better by the lapse of time, as no material dinaination of any of the public debt is effected. Indeed, even the payment of the an-nual interest has depended, and will depend, on the anticipation of the revenue properly belong-ing to the next fiscal year.⁵ Asystem of providing means to n eat the liabilities of the State, which pays no part of the §debt, and meats the payment of the annual interest, by drafts on a fund raised for the discharge of another duty, and which col-lects from the people, upwards of $2,000,000 yearly, requires supervision and amendment. A careful revision of the Reveaue laws of the Com-monwealth, increasing the tax on such items, as will beer without injury, an addition to the pre-sent burthens, with due economy in the appro-priations and expirates of government, would not only place the Treasury on a sound basis, with regard to the State. A result of this character would also, if set apart for that purpose, create a sinking fund to m set the amount now due and de-mendable of the State. A result of this character would be honors ble to the Commonwealth, and gratifying to the c the commonwealth, and gratifying to the c the commonwealth, and gratifying to the c interest would be im-modinely restored to the commonity; public credit would be perman unity established, and the Trea-sory relieved of a portion of the public debt.
