WOMAN'S CONSTANCY. BY CLARA.

CHAPTER I. There are swift hours in life—strong rushing hours,
That do the work of tempests in their might.
Mrs. HEMANS. Twas night a dark and terrible night in mid winter. The snow was falling thick and fast, and the rude north winds played many a strange and fantastic game with its fairy flakes. Now here, and there, they denced about, till, like a wearie child, they slept at last upon the bosom of their mother earth. Not a sound, save the fury of the storm king, disturbed the gloomy hours. The village clock had just tolled the hour of ten, when a man, wrapped in a cloak, and with muffled face, issued from a low hovel by the way-side. As the door closed after him, a soft voice mur-mured, a God help you Frank," and again all was still. With much effort the man braved the pitiless storm, and crossing to another street, ascended the steps of an elegant brick building. He besi-tated a moment, then roug the bell. A servant obeyed the summons "Is your master within?" asked he, in a dis-"He is; your name, sir." "Tell him a geatleman wishes to speak with him."

Soon the servout returned, saying his master would wait upon him directly.
With trembling step he entered the room, and not daring to look around him, sunk upon the nearest seat, and covered his face with his hands Soon an approaching step and the opening doo announced the expected inmate.

"Is your business with me, sir?" asked the old gentleman, approaching his visitor who had in voluntarily risen on his entrance.

"Then please be expeditions, as company awaits me." awate me.

The young man did as he was desired, and throwing aside his disguise, revealed a pale and baggard countenance, which at first made the beholder start with horror. But immediately recovering himself, he exclaimed in a harsh voice, "Frank Delaval, this is no home for you; be "Ohl father, sparn me not from you now Help! only belp!" and as he said this, he threw filmsell on his kness before him.

"Call me not father!" exclaimed Mr. Delaval, in a voice almost suffocated with rage. "I no longer acknowledge you as a son."

But," replied the young man, " hear me for hu-manity's sake—for the sake of Ella, my wife!" "Breathe not her name," excluimed the old man, striking his clenched fists; "let her suffer; she deserves it." And shutting the door violently,

For a moment, Frank seemed motionless then rising, he cast a glance at the portrait of his sainted mother, and left the house an altered man. The iron had entered his soul. Hitherto he had hoped his father would relent—would forgive him, although he had wed the poor and lowly Ella Morven. But alas! there are some hearts which will not relent; and woe! woel to those who ome within their influence.

Legislature last winter till the present time, that by fire this afternoon. may make them appear in the eyes of the world as the most self sacrificing philanthropis powalize. We must notice one remark we find in this Manu facturers' Tract. On the very first page is the following declaration : "They (the mills,) give employment to about fifteen hundred bands, the chief portion of whom are females or boys, who would otherwise be without the means of supporting them zelves." After reading this, we asked ourself, is the ou thor a knave or a fool ? Have Smith, Ricardo Say, Vale and others, labored in vain, that such stuff can be palmed upon an intelligent commun ty for sound Political Economy ! We are afflicted with a vague idea that were the mills all suspended. instead of throwing the fifteen hundred hands out of employment, the demand for labor would be in creased perhaps one hundred fold—for does not machinery perform the labor of human hands:

"But," replies the mill man, "if you stop our mills will not our customers and discovered by the control of the contr instead of throwing the fifteen hundred hands out of mills will not our customers send their orders to other establishments in other places 7" Of course, and will not the demand for labor be there increased a proportion to the increased demand for manufactured articles; and may not your hands go there and enjoy the rich blessings which you so earnestly promise them here! The folly or dishonesty of the position assumed by the manufacturers is too palpuble to require many words in relutation. We wish simply to correct the erroneous opinion into which many have fallen, that labor is of necessity the slave of capital. Let but the wealth producers be united-united as are their, oppressors-and they

Market street, three or four coats. On the same day a thief attempted to take a cost from a house on Water street; but was caught and kicked out.

On the same day, or day before, one of the board ers at Christy's Hotel, Pean street, lost a coat, which he supposes was stolen. He is very much appoyed as there were some documents; in one of the pock No persons have been arrested, and none are su pected. The Police can do nothing. De At the meeting on Saturday evening, when the Star Factory or its proprietors were referred to, the audience screamed with delight. Such tribute of public esteem we look upon as the most substantial of all earthly wealth. We would rather have one cheer like some of those given to Myers, Hunter & Voeghtly, than be the possessor of all the Cotton Factories with the Monongahela Improvement thrown in.
