THE STARS. BY C. C. VAN ZANDT.

In the aurze arch of heaven Stars are keeping watch to-night, Ficecy clouds, by light winds driven, Sailing on their silvery light;
 And I think, as far in ether I behold the moon's great shield, They are flowers the angels wreath her, Culled from earth's deserted field.

Flowers that once loved to linger In the world of human love; Touched by Deaths's undying finger For a better life above; For a better life above ; Ob 1 yestars 1 ye rays of glory ! Gem lights io the guittering dome ! Could ye not relate a story Of the spirits gathered home !

Ye have seen life's wearled sailor Sick beneath the storm-ploughed main, Do your beams grow neybr paler 1 Are not dews the tears ye rain f Are not dews the tears ye rath , When my dearest hopes are broken, And my world in darkness lies, Still shine o'er me se a token Of the land beyond the skies.
