WOOL. ITS FORMATION AND GROWTH We copy the following article from the PATERT grades and qualities of wool are distinguished in Europe. It will also be seen that wool growing" s there a scientific, business. And it will have to profitable a business as it is capable of being made. Western Farmers who expect to grow wool in the same careless, slovenly manner that stand apart from each other, without showing too they grow grain, will soon find it an unprofitable occupation :

The wool of sheep does not grow, as does the bair of other beasts, in a manner that every indi-vidual hair takes its own direction, but its many threads of wool unite slways into one little tuit, and each of these again, stands in such conne tion with the rest as may allow every wool pelt. (every fleece,) as a whole to appear like a web The single tults we call the "staple.

The formation of the staple may easily be discerned in the surface of the fleece, which contains on it web formed furrows, wooly seams, but will be more noticeable if one lays the same out together in any particular place. If we examine the sta sely, we may discern in it the so called "strands," (still smaller bunches) in which many threads of wool are closely connected. Strands of different forms, different fineness, or of an irreglar curl, transfer these peculiarities to the staple, wereby yet further the exterior of the whole fleere . We may, with tolerable certainty, from this form, and from the state of the staple ion as to the condition of the threads of wool, and correctly assume that the wool which has a good structure of staple, must also possess the other good properties which render it a value ble article. But the inverse of this does not alble article. Dut the introduction of the sheen, dust face, are called nd smut, moist and musty fodder, frequently the soaked state of the fleece, &c., may give to the staple a faulty appearance, without affecting the nes of the wool, or being injurious for the whole life time of the animal. The wool appears; otherwise, in the staple, nuch shorter than it really is in its extended state ecause by its curl it is very much contracted .-This is so much the more the case, as the smaller and the more regular are the bends of the single hreads of wool, the more it allows itself to be stretched out far beyond the length of the staple, ndeed, to double the unstretched length of the Such we call wool with "short contracted same staple." and such as scarcely allows itself to be stretched to half its length, or yet less wool of a long extended staple."

The staple itself must approach a cylindrical shape where it is well formed, and be round and othly terminated (blunt) on the upper end, and not flat. A too large and broad stap , which gives the upper surface of the fleece a thick close ess, leads to the probable inference that the wool harsh, yet the staple often appears of greater nce, that is, more extensive, than it eally is, while a stronger and larger staple in extent is frequently composed of a greater number

In our daily walks through the city, we were teract this fault, which usually affects the sheep, truck with the improved and improving appearace Often the strand etween the should are not fwisted together in cork-screw form, but We copy the following article from the PATERT in small knots; this, indeed, is not so bad, but it OFFICE REPORT FOR 1847. We may learn from is not desirable. When the strands of the entire believe there never was a time when the condition of merchants, manufacturers and mechanics was better than now. No one can be so blind as not to this the extreme nicety with which the different fleece become very perceptible, and hardy seem to have any connexion, then it is said, "the wool is observe the immense changes that have taken place rowed." In a slight degree this is no fault, but within a few short years. The amount of business it becomes so as soon as there is a want of connow doing is unprecedented for the season; for we ction of the separate strands, and then the fibres be pursued scientifically in this country to be as can be easily separated from each other. The are yet in the midst of the cold, dall, weather. The spring promises well. Every intelligent merchant wool, then; where such is the case, is "stranded," which is not very different from being twisted. If the particular fibres, strands and stapales, much dependence on each other, then it is distinsuished by the term "empty-hollow" staple. If the whole of the wool is empty or hollow, such a conditioned fleece is called a "bollow Sheep which are thus affected in generleece." al base only a little wool. The faults also of being stranded or twisted are often connected with it When the not clear wool (already explained above) is found in so great a degree, that the strands in many places lie closer together than in others, and the curves of the particular fibres are very different in form and size, the wool is called angled," and in a yet higer degree "felted."---This fault may sometimes arise out of a disease, The shipments east must necessarily be extensiv sickly weak state of the sheep; and besides, is probably an original tendency. In an unblemished fleece, not a trace of felt is to be met. The fibres of wool belonging to a staple, must have been so erfectly closed together, that the particular staple from the surface of the fleece to the foundation may be fully separated from each other, without the particular fibres running up, across, or in streaks from one staple to another, as it were binding it, and probably passing through many. Such fibres, which usually are smooth and extended, and so appear longer than others, are called "bind" or "false hairs," and then, when they pass in through many staples and lie in upon the sur-face, are called "overrunners." These last are sometimes to be found in old bucks, though they were formerly celebrated animals, when they have been strongly used for breeding. But if now the that of any other paper in the city. We think a restaple of a fleece allows itself to be separated even to the foundation, then must the connection below on the skin be stronger than on the surface, and not have its foundation in cross running bind bairs, but only in similarity and evenness of the on our paper. It is mailed regularly in all direct wooly fibres, which cause an inward inclining together of the same. This desirable connection in vised of every thing going on in the commercial the shorn fleece is called "doughy," and adds great world. value to it. But the "soil-soaked, soily," must not be confounded with the same. This is one of the greatest faults of wool, by which it is ren dered useless for any valuable fabric. It consists in a perfect felting of the lower part of the fleece, while at the bottom of the same, many defective fibres of wool run across through the staple and strands, and so complicate and "telt" is it that the wool can only be drawn apart with great trouble. Probably this fault in a great measure arises as i consequence of an earlier sickly state of the chanics and laborers." This is one of the most im- something in it about the "Soap Mines of Batter (probably an original cause of it) is the stratified

The tocks on hand are superior to and more extensive than any of past years. Of Pittsburgh manufacta red articles, it is needless to speak in praise. The dry goods men are putting in their supplies, and ar making preparations for an unusually heavy demand. Produce and the staple products of the south are be ing received in great abundance. What turn the market will take as to prices, remains to be seen. As has already been announced, the canal will be open ready to float boats, in the early part of next week. The water will be let in to-day and Monday.
