[From Sarlain's Magazine FIRST LOVE. BT MRS. C. M. BEDGWICK

Much has been said for and against the first enkindling of this sentiment in the young bosom. All sixteen is for it, much experience, alas! against it. There is certainly something very enchanting that first love to which all the freshest visions hing very enchanting in youth are ministering and subsidiary-which copies its idol in the pure heaven of its own breast without spot or blemish-which fears no change, nor shadow of change—the love, while hope has never been cheated, expectation disappointed, or faith broken—the love that glows in the fire of its own broken—the love that glows in innocence itself, and enthusiasm, and is as pure as innocence itself, and radiant with "clouds of glory" from our elder and Journal:

Most happy—most blessed are those on whose first love the seal of reality has been set, whose summer hasdeveloped and ripened the seed sown in spring time, and who worship through life at the altar on which the vestal fire was lighted!

Something of this I said to a friend, who, with an equivoral smile, replied that she would tell me an equivocal smile, replied, that she would tell me

It is only necessary to depart from reality so far as to use assumed names. "I was staying," said said my friend, (the relator was an English woman) at Avonside, with Lady Anne Harvey, duinsessigteen. Lady Anne's education was completely, up to fifteen, the English nursery education At fifteen she was as ignorant and as undeveloped in all that relates to the wonderful relations o man and woman, as the children of your country at the age of five or six. Her dear, kind papa, was the type of all grown up men, and her teasing, tormenting, noisy, but still loving brothers, of the younger portion of that species. But time in enlarging my horizon, had not chastened my imagination. I conceived a most passionate affec tion for my charming triend. Feeling very humbly about, my own personal charms, my young lord's young dreams were for Mary Anne. She was my heroine of romance, and all my romantic love was lavished upon her; so that precious sen-timent which, as I now think, should be developed goes there for sketches of that rich old rural cultivation, characteristic of our country. Lady Anne, at her father's request, rose one morning to show me the rising sun, from a point of view much cel-ebrated, and which Sir Guy thought unrivalled. A winding path by a crisp little brook, overbung with flowery strubs led to it. It was at the high est point in the park, and crowded with an oak, as old and more beautiful than the royal oak at Boscohel. Under this oak tree were rustic seats, and n table; and as we approached it, we observed a rastling of the high shrubbery that screened the seat from us. Some one was, evidently, hastily retiring from the place, and when we reached it, there were proofs that a real person, and no ghost, had just preceded us. A pencil was dropped by the bench, and on it lay a highly finished sketch of my friend, as she had sat with me, (I was omitd) the day before near a lovely rosary, trying her maiden fortune in the fashion of Margaret, in Faust, by picking off the leaves of a rose. Lady Anne shed us she perceived the unmistakable resemblance. "How spirited!" she said. "How ex pressive thow like!" I said, "But who can Connecticut; have done it?" she asked. "Some poor old ar. The next day, on a green bank, by a path we daily frequented, we found another sketch, lying under a stem of lovely roses, of a all good Democrats, in every part of the country. Here my friend appeared as she had sat the preceding day, under a tree overhung with flowering vines, while I read to her. The little brook was carling away beyond us, or rather beyond her, for vision. Her large black Newfoundland was lyiny at her feet, and her prettiest of poodles lovingly enfolded in its huge paws. "How very strange!" she exclaimed. "How very pretty!" I said, "but she had ordered the groom to open the park gate; and, tempted by the beauty of the coming evening, and more by the free spirit of youth, that ever longs to get beyond bounds, we sallied forth. We did not return till the last ray of the long English favor. twilight was fading away. Lady Anne dreaded her father's disapprobation, (she had nothing from nore severe to dread) and she that good man drove rapidly. There was a steep bank, and a sharp turn near the park gate, for which she was too inexperienced to calculate; and in bringing the horses round too suddenly, she overset the ported and aided by a young man, who had come, Heaven knows whence, to her rescue. thereof on nimeel; and this proof should be contained in a deposition of the person who had been so provided by him with such horse, equipments, or military accourrements.

That in all cases where horses have been condemned by a board of officers on account of their, unfitness for service, in consequence of the Government failing to supply forage, all such horses and their equippage shall be allowed and paid for, whenever the facts shall be proven by legal and satisfactory evidence, whether oral or written, that such condemned horse and the equipage was turned over to a quartermaster of the army, whether any receipt therefor was given and produced or not." To establish a chaim under this provision the claimant must adduce the evidence of the witnesses mentioned under the head of first class of cases, satisfactorily proving that the property therein described was, while in the military service of the United States, condemned by a board of officers on accoast of their being rendered unft for service in consequence of the Government failing to supply forage, and that such property was turned over to a quartermaster of the United States army, explaining when the claimant was remounted, &c., as required in said first class of cases.

In no case can the production of the evidence previously described be dispensed with, unless the impracticability of producing it be clearly proved, and then the nearest and best other evidence of which the case is susceptible must be furnished in lieu thereof.

Every claim must be accompanied by a deposition of the claimant, "declaining that he has not received from any officer or agent of the United States any horse or horses, equipage, accourrements, mule, wagon, curt, boat, sleigh, or harness, (as the case may be,) in lieu of the property lost, nor any compensation for the same vas taken into the United States any horse or horses, equipage, accourrements, mule, wagon, curt, boat, sleigh, or harness, (as the case may be,) in lieu of the property at the time the same was taken into th [Journal and Gazette copy.] U.
