"The first step towards calling a national conven-tion was taken fast night at a preliminary meeting in this city. About thirty five persons wore prezent; and much discussion took place in regret to the insme of the intended association. It was finally agreed that it should be called the "British League." Much excitement prevails in relation to the late dis-cussion on the rebellion losses, and a warm debate s creected in the Assembly to-night." "The first step towards calling a national conven-
