Written for the Saturday Morning Pos THE FERN MEDAL. BY EPHRA.

A few days ago, while rambling over the beau tiful hills east of our city, and admiring the scenery that borders our noble rivers, I suddenly found myself at the site of the New Basin. Some workmen were breaking down the shale overhaning an exhausted bed of coal, and filling up the pit, in order to make a solid bottom for the water. went down into the excavation, without thinking ble of appreciating good writing. that I should find in it a relic of the flora of an epoch long anterior to the creation of man; or that, from the rude and broken masses of rubbish which surrounded me, my mind should be filled with a train of ideas as novel as they were de- ology is beginning to attract general attention. I was first struck with the linear marks upon the clay, which told its history. It had once been held in solution by an ancient ocean, and was deposited as its sediment. The shale beneath the clay conveyed to my understanding the same story. In tossing the bits of shale over with my foot, my appear in a fow days. eye rested upon a fragment which I picked up with the same eagerness as if I had found a medal belonging to the age of Pericles. And a medal it was, but of an era far more remote. A die had been stamped upon it by the hand of the Great Mechanic of the Universe, antecedent to the birth of Adam. It was a medal of His past creation; and the device was a beautiful incented fossil fern, belonging to the tribe of Polypodiacea. I have it now before me, and it conveys in mute cloquence a legend to my mind, that excites it to high and to be paid in Specie. holy thoughts. In the Commons, the Parliamentary oath bill, having for its object the release of Jewish disability, has been read a second time and agreed to by a larger majority than before. Mr. Roebuck was about bringing before the Par. liament his plans for the better government of the Cabiact. He has also moved for an inquiry as to the smount of the debts due the British subjects by foreign governments. The argument on the Writ of Error in the case of Mr. Smith O'Brien has been read before the House of Lords. Before hearing the Crown Lawyer, the law Lords and Judges manimously directed that the errors assigned by the counsel for the plaintiffs, O'Brien and McManus, could not be maintained, and the judgment of the Queen's Court of Ireland stands affirmed. They will probably be transported by the 1st of June. It is comored that the prozecution against Mr. Duffy will be abandoned.
