It is the pride of our par-ty that it has no interests but those of the imasses of the people—no object but the welfare of the State. These interests and this object depend, in a degree which it is not easy to estimate, upon the selection, by this Convention, of a candidate for the office of Canal Commissioner, for I assume it to be a fact, as certain as human anticipations will permit any as-sumption, to be, that the nomination is to triumph through the calm and majestic power of the Democ-racy as displayed at the ballot box, in October next. There is one other topic to which I beg leave, y very briefly, to advert. It is the characteristic of f freemen to cherish and to express their preferences among the individuals brought into view for stations of public trust. But I am persuaded that the firm-ness, the zeal, and the energy which may mark these preferences upon this occasion, will be mingled with and chastened by such a spirit of kindness and would be called, which would seriously retard the glorious Commonwealth.
