Bay What a humiliating spectacle a comparison between the two parties of this country presents.

The Democratic party, says the Lancaster Intelligencer, even in defeat, is great and glorious; while the other, the "Pederal no-party party;" and all the show of place and power, cannot concent its deformity, and is becoming daily more desperate and unpopular. How noble, in view of this comparison, will be the re-ascendancy of the Democratic party. With what acclamations of jor will their advent to power be hailed. But the other party, alack and alas, what a destiny is before them, already shackled by its own perfidy, it will be buried in the shame itself has created, "unwept, unhonored, and unsung."
