The resources of the Treasury will be smiletent to tencell all that may be received in payment of dues to the Commonwealth, and to pay the Banks the smount funded, within two years. By this process, should the Banks agree to fund any considerable portion of them; they may all be taken out of circulation within the probent year. It may be urged that, as these metes do not now bear interest, they ought not jo be converted into a debt, on which interest will be payable. This, bowever, is but a superficial view of the subject. There is no longer any excase, for a continued violation of the public faith by the payment of the public creditors in depreciated currency; and the small amount of interest which will have to be paid, if the banks agree to find a portion of these notes, will be more than compensated by relieving the character, of the State from the continuation of this net of impastice, and the or it.
