We also visited Salem last week. What a sul stantial, stationary, self-satisfied, aristocratic look there is about this fine old town. How unlike any fother place in this changing, hurried, ambitious, advancing, levelling, new world of ours. But Sa lem is modern enough to be beautiful and elegant, the disparate with the and evidently rich enough to dispense with the noise and bustle and mad hurry of money-making After a Execution bill," had been pointed out to me, my mind was througed with sed and awful memories, and I looked involuntarily about me as I walked the streets, for "weird sisters," among the passers by. I saw, no wrinkle laced, sinistereyed old women, but I saw plenty smiling, bloomers and a support of the passers by the could be the same than the same transfer. eyen our girls, who could not deny their own witching beauty, were they hanged for it. Ah, it would have gone hard with them in the good old colony times! Neither trial by fire nor trial by water would have sayed them, for the name of their victims would have been "legion" After sil, are we wiser in our day and generation than all, are we wiser in our day and generation than our forefathers? They hung such as were fairly proved to be witches and condemned as such, but, adoubtless, many escaped through cunning or bribery, or the pity of others. But, in our time, all possessing, or suspected of possessing, or thinking they possess dangerous charms, are immediately apprehended and immured in close ball rooms, and the possession of the process of th cert rooms, school rooms, kitchens and nurse ries; deprived of proper air, exercise aims and comforts: forbidden to ramble and climb, laugh loud and wear thick shoes; compelled to walt into the morning, and sleep into noon; to subsist on French novels and French cookery; to embroi der blue black brigands and pink cherubs in wors ted; or, even worse, to toil day after day in noisy factories and millinery shops! Thus are our witchwhile, held in their thrall the souls of men. Thus, grown pale from the plump figure grown spare, from the next dress grown careless, from the "low, sweet voice," grown sharp and petulant, moment, a healthy, glowing face was turned to-ward me from only the other side of the table, and a pair of witch-hazel eyes met mine, and smilled as in unconscious denance of my fancy's joining room, by which his fancy was enlivened. He had many little whims and peculiarities, some of which may excite a smile; for instance, in the spring he would go for a drive in his open coach while it rained, to receive (in the quaint language of Aubrey) "the benefit of irrigation" which he was wont to say was very wholesome, "because of the nitre in the air and the universal spirit of the world." He had extraordinary notions respecting the virtue of nitre, and conceived it to be of inestieither alone of with saffron, in warm broth, every morning for thirty years! He seems to have been a point of swallowing a grain and a halfor "castor" in his broth and breakfast for two successive days. And every six or seventh day he drank an infusion of rhubarb in white wine and beer immediatel before dinner. He made it a point to take air i hour after sources; and, if possible, the selected a spot-where he could enjoy the perform of musk, yours, and sweet violets. Besides thus breathing the pure air of nature, he was sumigrated with the market houses, squares, streets, lanes, and alleys of his bed, he was anoisted all over with oil of all-monds, mingled with salt and saffron, and this was followed by gentle friction. He was anoisted and enacted by the citical streets and enacted by the citical streets and enacted by the citical streets and common Councils assembled, That if any person or persons shall here after the beat eason, often proves to be the warst. If the goods sold this will be read the beat saving of fifteen realless years, in the person of Charles the old Bourbon dynasty, in the person of Charles the old Bourb monds, mingled with salt and saffron, and this was followed by gentle friction. He was rather a harler, and when young prefered game and poultry, but in after life, gave the chice to butchers' meat, which had been well beaten before roasted. At every meal his table was strewed with flowers during supper wine in which gold and been quench or supper, was always bot, and on returning to wine, syrup of roses, and amber, and washed it down him to sleep. In the spring he was found of a glass of spiced pomegranate wine early in the nording, and greatly enjoyed water-cresses. Hardly is he secure in his seat, and the satonish-

Union, says.

The cabinet are now fishing alter eets with tondish bait in the waters of the muddy Potomac, while the head of the government is lacking after an insurrection, in Caba in the iron monitains of Pennsylvania. The fact is, we are under a regency government, and there is no use in deaying the fact, or in endeavoring to keep it close any longer. A President has been elected who cannot, or who will not, perform the duties of his bigh station; and although no ultra whigh, he has given his power into the hands of a cabinet of ultra whige, so blue with ancient federalism, that indigo, will make a white mark upon their azure hides. "Is this the entertainment to which we are; injuited?" confiner, is not the reacht of a "nomination" on the part of the slaughter house men of Philadelphia "not fit to be made ?" Daniel Webster was right once in his life. The Richmond Examiner reports a ho act of cruelty done to a negro in that city. The owner tied him up in the morning, bent and tortured him all day, burnt parts of his body off with fire. and at night took him down-dead. The murderer is in prison.

LOCAL MATTERS. THEATRE.—We did intend to witness the repre entution of Paul Pry on Monday evening, but bus ness prevented our seeing but a small portion of the comedy. We were exceedingly annoyed at the disbune at Washington regards it as " a tempest in a appointment, for we consider it an excellent piece teapot," and says that the announcement of the re. and calculated to display the historical talent of the Company. As far as we were capable of judging om our limited observation, the comedy was well cast and respectably played. The part of Paul Pry by Mr. Robinson, was an expanded piece of acting, but the dressing was not "so honored in the breech" as we have been accustomed to see, he however equalized the usual excrescences, and we suppose we must " e'in cry content." Mr. Roy's person tion of Frank Hardy was very clever, and we may safely say, by way of commendation, that whatever character he attempts, a like result may be antici pated. The crafty virago, Mrs. Subtle, found a suitable representative in Mrs. Leicester, for the was most certainly "every inch" the parts, Mrs. Donovan and Miss Cruise were au fait in thei espective parts, as were also the remaining charac ers of the piece.

On Tuesday evening we were more at leisure an ' just dropped in," and appropriated an entire front seat to our especial use. The audience was extremely slim, as might have been expected from the neagreness of the bill presented. Indeed, we cannot see the policy of craming down these old worn out farces, particularly when the theatre receives its principal support from citizens who have endure them week in and week out for years. Look, for instance at the farce of Slasher and Crasher, also at the play of Dombey and Son, and compare their success with the pieces of Tuesday evening. There is certainly new material enough for a variety, and we most assuredly think it to the interest of the managers to employ it. pourtrayed by Mr. Smead, and we witnessed its reitation with great pleasure. In parte like these Mr. S. has few superiors, and we are surprised that Archer, Dunn, and Miss Crulse; deserve great praise to leave their names at the Hook Store of his spring.

Connection.-We stated yesterday on the author ity of a city paper, that a warrant had been issued egainst John Gotchalck before Ald. Steel for attempting to swindle Mrs. E. Wilson out of a draft from he Michigan Insurance Co., payable to her at the Exchange Back of Pittsburgh. We now understand that the draft was regularly drawn in the name of Mr. Gotchelck and that as soon as he heard of the matter be gave bail. No hearing of the case has perceived by the world that the king of the French carcised as entire a control over the liberties of his subjects at Charles X, Louis XVII, or any other of that line had previously done.

Another period of agitation ensues. Eighteen years of chafing under the tight roin and spur of their elected monarch, move gloomily along. His unremitting efforts are directed to the completion of a line of posts and military defences around the city and delightful sort of exchange:
