A Change of Boots. Mr. Mackey, a recent traveler in the U. States, gives the following graphic account of a trick played in Carolina, and which, it appears, is by o means an uncommon one:
"Having had but a little rest on board the steamer the previous night. I slept soundly in one of the hotels the first night ashore. How far into the morning my slumbers would have carried me I know not, but at a nerty early hour I was arous I know not, but at a pretty early hour I was arous ed by a noise which for the few moments elapsing between he deep bleep and perfect consciousness, I took to be the ringing of the sleigh bells in the streets of a Canadian town. I was soon undeceive ed, the intense heat, even at that early hour, driving all notions of winter, sleighs, and sleigh bells out of my head. But though in Carolina, there was still the jugling of the bells to remind me of Canada. Every bell in the house seemed to have become suddenly bewitched but my own, and anxious to know what was the matter, I soon made it join in the chorus. Even in the ringing between characters, and for some time I amused temper on the part of those that pulled them, which they indicated. Some rang gently, as if those pulling them shrunk from being troublesome; others authoritatively, as if the ringers would be obeyed at once and without another summons; and others again anguly, as if they had exclusive privileges to themselves, which are not exalready been frequently pulled in voin. Very soon all became angry, some waxing into a towering passion; for although all might ring, all could not possibly be answered at once. I had brief time to notice these things ere the waiters were heard hurrying up and down stairs, and along the lengthy wooden lobbies which echoed to their footsteps. Things now appeared to be getting serious, and jumping out of bed I opened my door just as a troop of black fellows were hurrying past each with a bucket of water in his hand. I imme diately interred that the house was on fire; and as American houses generally on such occasions go relation to the off like gun cotton. I sprang back into my room, with a view to partly dressing myself and making my-escape. A universal cry for "boots," however Our 1 ningled with every variety of imprecation o that functionary's head, from the simple ejaculation to the elaborate prayer, soon that the case was less urgent than I had supposed. and on further investigation it turned out that the nousual hubbub had been created by some one playing overnight the old and clumsy trick changing the boots before they were taken from the bed room doors to be cleaned, so that on be ing replaced in the morning each guest was provided with his neighbor's instead of his own. I had lain down the happy possessor of a pair of Wellingtons, which, in the morning, I found converted standing at a lady's door, whose shoes had been with almost Rail Road speed. to Mexico, and glory. It was not the good for tune of all so readily to discover their property, the majority of the guests having to breakfast in his own Judicial District he is much esteemed and his own Judicial District he is much esteemed and collected together in the great hall, numbers among his warm admirers, members of all each man afterwards selecting, as he best could. parties. Until the nature of the joke was discovered, the poor Boots had a narrow escape of his life, and was amusing to witness the chuckle of the blac waiters, as, on discovering the trick, they quietly returned with their unemptied buckets, to their farmers, merchants and mechanics not having been honored by even mention in the call, this declaration by the Convention is modest, to say the least. The laptuction was ordered to issue, and the patronising manner in which the manufacturers propose to quietly insinnate their fingers into the pockicts of those employed in agricultural pursuits, patting them the while encouragingly on the back, with the assurance how advantageous it is for their interest, might be taken as a good joke, but for the more est, might be taken as a good joke, but for the more serious consequences that may grow from permitting it to pass unrebuked. We will mention that the bag which this letter should have gone in was to be opened at Uniontown and at no other intermediate office. We do not say that this letter was lost in the Uniontown Post Office; but, as Boeler was in jail, we are sure he did not take it. We regret that the testimony did not go to the jury for what it was worth.

Deaperate Affray.—Last evening two men entered the American House, Smithfield street; and one of them named James McDonald war seen taking oysters from the refrigerator. The bar keeper, Thos. Finegan, (a boy about 15 years of sige) ran up to arrest him and called for assistance. McDonald and his companion made an assault upon him, when he drew a knife and stabbed McD. in two places—in the back and under the arm. The wounds were severe, but Drs. Dilworth and Wilson thought them not fatal. Finnegan was arrested and examined before Mayor Harten.
