The Irish Exiles.

The following extracts from a letter written by gentleman residing in Van Dieman's Land, must be nteresting to the families, friends, and admirars of the exiled Irish leaders :---

In your fast you inquired anxiously for Meagher I must now tell you that we are on the most intimate terms with all the exiles. We have met Meagher, Martin, and Mitchel. The two latter are stationed Martin, and minthel. The two latter are stationed but a few minutes walk from this. As to Meagher, we went twenty-five miles to see him, to the lakes, the trysting-place, where the three districts meet; but, after all, were disappointed. It seems hard of the government to confine each to one district after they had given their parole not to escape. Howev-er, they do not adhere strictly to the wishes of the concernent.
