FROM HARRISBURG CORRESPONDENCE OF THE MORNING POST | the Secretary of the Commonwealth, passed a final

NUMBER XXI. HARRISBURG, Pebruary 9, 1851. A more dismal, cold, dark, gloomy mornin ever dawned upon the State Capital, than this It has been sleeting for two days past—the side. &c., relating to the early history of Pennsylvawalks are covered with ice, and pedestrians are nade to kiss their mother Earth more frequently than I presume is congenial with their feelings. On Saturday the very able Report of Robe Farris, civil engineer, appointed by the Canal Board to make a survey of the route to avoid the Inclined Planes of the Portage Railroad, was read in the Senate, and 2000 copies in English and 1000 in German ordered to be printed. This Report enters fully into the details of the cost of the proposed routes, four of which were surveyed, of different grades. I give you below the estimate of the cost of these routes :

This is the actual estimated cost of the different routes, from which, however, is to be deducted the amount of material belonging to the Portage 51.62 51.00 Road. Mr. Powers, Superintendent of this Road, estimates the value of the old materials from 13 miles of the Road that would be avoided by dispensiog with the five Western Planes, at $149,990. 20,00 Estimating the old materials on the same princi-13,00 ple for 21 miles of the old Road that will be avoided, if the new Road is made, embracing ten Inclined Planes, Depot and Riggers left on Summit. &c., the estimate will stand thus:

demonstrated by the Report, that I cannot but think that, unwilling as the members may be to increase the State Debt, they will grant the request of the Canal Commissioners, and make the appropriation. The estimate of W. S. Campbell, the present Superintendent of the Portage Railroad, for motive power, trucks, cars, running expenses, &c., is $222,606 28, and for repairs, $63,825, making un aggregate of $286,431 28. REMARKABLE Escape.—The following, from the Newark (N. J.) Advertiter of the Sth instant, describes an escape somewhat similar to that of General Wander Thompson a few years since, except that in General T.'s case he was saved by his pressence of mind in lying down flat until the cars had passed over him, whereas, in the present instance, the individual owed his safety to his insensibility, or, as the French say, au bon Dieu del torogne:

BY BEV. DR. JOHN C. LORD, D. D. Lost Titan of the stormy Sen, Long waited for by weary eyes, Which blind with tears still gaze for thee While rainbow hues of Hope arise Above the dim and wintry lea, Shining upon the rold grey skies Like Sunbeams on a Sepulchre!

THE ATLANTIC.

Say, Glant Stemmer of the Deep,
Where hast thou wandered from thy way?
Mid Polar ice art thou saleep
Benumbed beneath the Prost King's sway?
Or Southward, broken, do'st thou creep
Where ever glows the God of Day;

Where now, that joyous company,
Who, trusting in thy speed and power,
Embarked on a December's sea;
Who, homeward, thought that every hour
Should want them on,—as gallantly,
Though wild winds blow and storm cloud
The Adantic strikes out fast and free? Where are they? Echo answers, where!
Strange visions of their fate arise,
Of Summer seas and islets fair,
Of tropic fruits and sunny skies;
A storm scaped erew are wandering there, A storm scaped creware wanuers Gazing around with curious eyes, Unmindful of their late despair.

Anon, a gallant Ship is seen
Stemming the waves by fierce winds driven;
Mid thunder peals the lightning's gleam
Plays down her masts, her sides are riven;
The doomed crow, waked from their dream
Of home and kindred, cry to heaven,
And down she goes the waves between!

And now upon a calm clear night The Atlantic rushes on her way. With hundred arms she cleaves the bright And trauquil waters, where they lay Reflecting back the silvery light e glad moonbeams as they play, ing the ripples in their flight.

Hark! from the Ship, a crash, a cry! The prisoned Demon bursts his shell, Hark: trom the Saip, a crass, a cray. The prisoned Demon bursts his shell; Hurling her timbers towards the sky, While fires as from the mouth of Hel Dart, fast and furious, flaming high, As when from Æina's crater lell The blazing layas apward fly.

Once more along the silent main.
The Steamer plies thro' night's dark pall.
No star shines out, and drops of rain.
Upon the nodding deck-watch fall.
The panting Fitan drives amain.
Heedless and fearless over all;
The startled look out cries in yain—

"A Ship, a Ship!" but ah! too late, The Atlantic with her mighty mass; Strikes, crushing like the blow of fate. The nameless Coaster, on, alas! With broken bow, an opening gate, Through which the sullen waves do pass, She staggers with her deadly freight.

Thus the dark Rider of the Wave.
Leaps like a Lion on his prey
And wounded finds himself a grave;
Through opening seams the waters play
And all the golden cabins lave,
And stubborn Anees are bent to pray
Where part the Beautiful and Brave.

Like some spent wrestler on his knee The stout ship struggles as she feels The grap from which she cannot flee, Her Giant Driver madly wheels To grapple with the enemy, But all in valn—the Atlantic reels And headlong, plunges down the sea.

THE SEA SERPENT .- The Journal of Commerce publishes the following account of a sea serpent, lating that it comes from a gentleman well known to them, who vouches for the integrity and varacity of Capt. Bernsse: Capt. F. Bernese, of the bark Frances Watte, at this port from Rio de Janairo, in lat. 15 N., long, 55, saw a corpont that passed within thirty or forty feet of his vessel, and appeared to be about sixty feet on the water. It passed so near the vessel as to be distincily seen. Its motion was up and down, like the swimming of a leech; not horizental like the motion of a snake or an eel. It appeared to be about as large os, and shaped like the main yard of the bark, tapering off towards the extremities. Its progress through the water was very rapid. When first seen, it was approaching from the S. E., and it passed the bark heading N. W., without any apparent alteration of its course. Its head differed from that in the of the water, and distinctly seen. No fins were

We have not unfrequently called attention to this article in the columns of our paper, and we have done so with the full confidence that it was a good one, and deserving the patronage of the public. We have had a chance to witness its effects upon some of our friends which, in addition to the high encominus passed upon it by our brethren of the press, not in paid paths, but in honest, candat statements, from having derived a borne fit themselves, makes us desirous of advising all those who have occasion to resort to a remedy for pulmonary affections, to avail themselves of it. We have too much confidence in the proprietors to believe they would intrust this or any other medicine upon the community, unless they had full faith in its efficacy—in confirmation of which the proprietors offer a mass of testimosiy from the most unquestionable sources. Neither would they be understood as saying that this will always care consumption after it is senied, although it soldom fails to relieve the worst cases—but at this season of the year almost every body is liable to a cold, which, if neglected, will lead to fatal results—by taking this medicine we doubt not many lives may be saved.—Reo England Washingtonian, Boston, Jan. 2, 1847.
