THE POTATO ROT.

AUSE OF THE DISEASE .- THE ONLY REMEDY, RESORT TO INDIGENOUS SEED.

His Excellency the Governor and the Honorable Council of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts :

GENTLEMEN-I am aware that there have been diverse hypotheses adduced by scientific and prac-tical gentlemen as to the nature of the various blights of the potato, but no one has as yet given to the public the primary or true cause of its de-

The common potato (Solanum tuberosum) is well known to be a plant indigenous to Columbia and Pero, South America, where it was found wild in its native soil, on the slopes of the Andes, several thousand feet above the see, from whence it was taken some 250 years ago into Spain and England, and from the last named country it was introduced into Ireland, where the field culture became so general that it gave rise to the name of Trish Potato.

I believe that the primary or true cause of the from a rarified atmosphere several thousand feet above the sea, to a dense one containing a super-abandance of hydrogen, near the sea. The condition of the atmosphere in which the majority of the potato crops have been raised for an unceating germ: Inclast remarks will snow the fallacy of attempting to procure healthy tu-bers from the seed of unhealthy plants. The only resort, to get the porato plant in a sound and healthy condition, is to bliam the tuber and seed from its indigenous soil, the country of Columbia or Peru, South America, several thou-sand feet above the sea, but not to purchase them at any convenient port along the Western coast of South America, where they may have deen culti-vared nearly more local which they may have deen culti-

South America, where they may have been culti-vated nearly upon a level with the Pacific sea; or they may be obtained, in a far less healthy condi-tion than the native of the highlands of Peru, from some of the farmers residing on the Alle-gheny mountains of Pennsylvania, who have kept their own pointees for seed from year to year-but this is a poor plan, as the potato you may get there has changed hands and climate for 250

The potato requires a rarified atmosphere, con-

The potato requires a rarified "atmosphere, con-taining less moisture than the atmosphere near the -sea, or the air which blows from itq it also re-quires a circulation of air between the tubers, hence the necessity of porous soils. I think that decomposed vegetable soil, containing gravel and stones sufficient to keep it open, situated on the side of a sloping mountait or hill, at some miles from the sea on the South-west aid of the of the side.

Juni way up, is the best locality; in New England for the culture of new seed and new (nbers. "The present potato' amongst us should be de-stroyed before the importation of "seed from South America, as they may become mired." . I cannot for a moment suppose that the potato is about passing away from the face of the globe, and in a few years be said "to be extinct," nor can I imagine the new technication of the state and in a few years be said "to be extinct," nor can I imagine this plant to be so short lived as some persons would have it, nor that the condi-tion of its indigenous atmosphere is, a altered in its atomic parts as no cause decay to this vegeta-ble in a rarified atmosphere under a tropical sun. Some persons have conjectured that the same cause which produced cholers in the human spe-cies generated the disease of the potato. Alas, i know not i But if I must make a comparison, I would suggest the idea that the spear to be similar to the disease of man called larynchitus; the stem not to, the disease of the arynchitus; the stem rot to the disease of the larynchilus; the stem. rot.to. the disease of the throat (bronchilis) and the wet and dry rot of the potato to consumption of the hugs, for the tuber is not a root, but a vegetable, and draws its chief: nourishiment from the air.<sup>210,000</sup> A well constituted man may ichaige his place of abode, at the age of two score years, and the food he livea upon, or the air he inhales, or both combined, may disorganize his body in a abort time after, so much so, as to give rise to the dis-ease called goot. or combined of
