OBEYING ORDERS. The oldest inhabitant perfectly remembers the Widow Trotter, who used many years ago, to occupy the small wooden house away down in Hanover street, in somewhat close proximity to Well, this widow was blesse with a son, who, like Goldsmith, and many other men, distinguished in after-life, was the dunce of his class. Well, so I would, said Bob, only you see mother has sent me after a pitcher of 'What do you care for that. Come along., 'Well,' said Bob, 'first let me hide the pitcher where I can find it again.'
With these words, he stowed away his earthen-ware under a flight of stone steps, and ac-compained his friend aboard ship. The pilot was urging the captain to cast off and take advan-tage of the wind and tide, but the captain was waiting the arrival of a boy who had shipped the day before, and wishing no good to his eyes for the delay he had occasioned. At last he turned to Bob and said

'Cast off that line there!' shouted the Captain, and the ship fell off with the tide, and was soon standing down the bay with a fair wind, and every stich of canvass set. She was bound for the Northwest, via Canton, and back again, which was then called the double voyage, and usually occupied four years. In the meanwhile the non-appearance of Bob seriously alarmed his mother. A night passed and the town crier was called into rea week, when she gave him up, had a not read for her in the meeting, and went into mour Just four years after the above occurrence the ship got back to port, and Bob, and his friend were paid off. The wages of the widow's son amounted to just four hundred and eighty dollars, and he found on squareing his accounts with the captain, that his advances had amount-ed to the odd tens, and four hundred dollars clear, ple that he passed. Nothing appeared changed; the same sight indicated an unchanging hospitality on the part of the same landlords, the same loafers were standing at the same corners—it seemed as if he had , been gone only a day. With the odd sights and sounds, Bob's old feelings revived and he almost dreaded to see deings revived, and he almost dreaded to see de-bouching from some alley, a detachment of boys sent by his ancient enemy, the schoolmaster, to know why he had been playing truant, and carry him back to receive the customary walloping.
When he was quite near home he said 'Joe, I wonder if anybody's found that old He stooped down thrust his arm under the earthenware he had deposited there just four years ago. Having rinsed and filled it at the pump, he walked into his mother's house, and found her seated in her accustomed arm-chair. She looked at him a minute, recognized him, screamed and exclaimed:
Why, Bob, where have you been? What have you been doing?
Gittin' that pitcher of water, answered Bob, setting it on the table, 'I always obey orders—you told me to be four years about it, and I Observations on the Mammoth Cave. The May number of Silliman's Journal contains an interesting account of the Mammoth Cave, in a letter addressed to Prof. Guyot, by Prof. Benj Silliman, ir., who has recently made an explora tion of its mysteries; and also, in connection with Mr. R. N. Mantell, made a collection of the animals found there. One atmospheric phenomenon attracted the attention of these gentlemen, and tasked their ingenuity for a satifactory explanation, viz:—The blast of cool air blowing outward from the mouth of the cave, which reoutward from the mouth of the cave, which renders it nearly impossible to enter with a lighted lamp. If the external sin has a temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit, the blast amounts to a gale; but if the air without has a temperature of 59—60 degree, no current of air is observed, and the flame of a lamp, held in a favorable position, indicate areas. ition, indicates none.

It imprediately occurred to me (said Prof. Silliman, that there must be two currents, one above of warmer air, passing inward, and one celow of colder air, passing outward, and the reverse; but experiment soon satisfied me that this was not the case. Only one current could guide, I found that this phenomenon had attracted his attention, and that he was satisfied from many observations that only one current existed and that this flared out when the external air was above 60 degrees, and inward when this was below 60 degrees.

The phenomenon is accounted for by Prof. Silliman on scientific principles, as follows:—The mouth of the cave is the only communication between the external air and the vast place him,—in that of the knave or the fool,—labyrinth of galleries and avenues which stretch but we belive that he has rather more of the foraway for many miles in the solid limestone. The air in these underground excavations is pure and exhilerating, which may, in part, be accounted for by the nitre beds of incredible extent, as the nitrogen which is consumed in the formation of the nitrate of lime must have its proportion of free oxygen disengaged, thus enriching this subterranean atmosphere with a large portion of the exhilerating principle. We are not so sensitive to attacks upon ourselves or our party as to think it necessary to resent every sinuation from a coward, or every unfounded though positive charge that may be made by an unprincipled opponent. In the shape in which the matter appeared in the Gazette no charge was made, and we answered that paper ecording to the character of the article. When the matter appeared, however, as it did n the American,—when a number of gentlemen of our party were positively charged with having done a certain act, under a certain contingency, we then replied in such a manner that the base author and circulators of the insinuations and charges could not misunderstand them. We are pleased to find our farmers giving attention to guano as a manure, and earnestly hope there may be a more general use of it in Pennsylvania. In some of our eastern and southern ounties a considerable number of enterprising farmers are using it upon a large scale with marked success, and many others are experi-menting with smaller quantities. In York county, we understand the judicious application of it has resulted in bringing many of the thin lands in the southern part of the county into fine condition; the harvest promising as richly there as the most fertile limestone regions. To aid in bringing about so desirable a result, we earnestly request those gentlemen who have used guano, to give us the benefit of their experience, short time, amongst a few individuals, about in order that we may present the subject in its true light to our readers. Many of the failures in the use of guano, are attributable to the impositions practised upon purchasers by the dealers. JOHN YOUNG, jr., Secretary. Hints to Parents. -- One great source o disease in children is the unhealthiness of parents! It would be just as reasonable to expect a rich crop from a barren soil, as that strong and healthy children should be born of parents whose constitutions have been worn out with intemperance and disease. A sickly frame may be originally induced by hardships, accidents, or intemperance, but chiefly by the latter. It is impossible that a course of vice or improducers should not soil the best perance, but chiefly by the latter. It is impossible that a course of vice or imprudence should not spoil the test constitution; and did the evil terminate here, it would be a just punishment for the folly of the transgressor. But not so: For when once a disease is contracted, and through neglect in applying the proper means it becomes rivited in the habit, it is then entailed upon posterity.—Female constitutions are as capable of improvement as family estates—and ye who would wish to improve, not only your own health, but that of your own offspring, by eradicating the many distressing diseases that are entailed through neglect or imprudence, lose no time in purifying the blood and cleaning the system. Married persons, and those about to be married, should not full to purify their blood, for how many diseases are transmitted to posterit. How often do we see scalds. Scroftla
