Manchester Mineral, Paint.—In to-day's paper will be found an advertisement of Messrs. Pudder & Ford in reference to this paint, to while we direct the attention of painters and others interested. We learn from persons who have used this article in painting houses, hurricane decks of steamboats, &c., that it is more suitable for these purposes than any which they have yet seen. One thing which makes this paint peculiarly valuable is the number and richness of its colors. On this account it is adapted to a greater variety of purposes than any which they have yet seen. One thing which makes this paint peculiarly valuable is the number and richness of its colors. On this account it is adapted to a greater variety of purposes than any of the kind which is now in the market. Expensive machinery has been erected for the preparation of this article, by which this and the Eastern markets will soon be liberally supplied. The proprietors deserve great credit for their persecutions are and activity in this producing from the soil an article which is capable of beautifying and preserving the handwork of man. We wish them success in their undertaking.  To the Deaf,—Although Doctor Hartley, the Aurist, has, during his present visit, had a very large number of patients, he has honorably fulfilled his engagements with the whole of the mand we understand it is his intention to leave next week. We would strennously advise those suffering from deafness to take immediate advantage of his short, remaining stay, as it is possible many years my elapse before so good an opportunity again occurs for obtaining relief.
