Mr. Jus. Bell's opinion, 2 Penn. Law Jour. 150.

Invasion has been shown as amounts to a breach of international law.

Neither Pennsylvania nor any of her citizens, have been shown to have been privy to any oct of violation. Our officers had nothing to do with the arrest directly or indirectly, until the prisoner was delivered at the town of Erie. If the sovereignty of Michigan was offended by the arrest, it was done by no Pennsylvanian, but by persons doing business in Michigan, and it may be presumed, by persons who are citizens there. The act was therefore a tresnass, or at most, a common criminal offender, and not a breach of international law.

There is no proof that our officers had any connection with the original arrest, and this connection cannot be inferred from the continuity of the transaction, because it can be accounted for by a presumption that makes the whole transaction consistent with law. The requisition of our Governor, and the warrant of the Governor of Michigan munde it the duty of the anthorities of Michigan to agreet and surrendered, and the presumption is that it was legally done. This presumption is not rebutted by the evidence that the arresting parties showed no warrant. The authorities may have acted without a garrant. We are not called upon here to show that they acted conformably to their law, they had a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and a duty to perform and they took their law, and the presumption is that it was legally done. WILMINGTON, September 7.

There was a terrible tragedy at Newark, yesterday about 5 P. M. A man named Edward Ginn, residing at Newark, 12 miles southwest of this place, and about 7 miles from Elkton, shot and killed two women, one of whom is reputed to be his wife, another his sister, and afterwards illed his child aged about ten years. Nothing further is known. The report was brought to this city last night by a passenger, who states that after Ginn committed the murder fied.

SECOND DISPATCH. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8. The reported murders at Newark, Delaware, proved to be exaggerated. Ginn discharged two arrels of a revolver at Henry Pritchard, wounding him severely. He also shot the sister of Pritchard, wounding her in the side. After which he again encountered Pritchard in a lane, where he shot him in the back, killing him inntly. The cause of the murder is jealousy. Ginn having suspected the woman, who was reputed to be his wife, and who had a child by him, of infidelity. He had not been arrested up

Yesterday, at a boarding house in Prince st., ten persons were accidentally poisoned, including Mr. Carr, his wife and children. Mrs. Carr, one of her childred, and the child of one of the boarders, have since died, and the others are very low. It is alleged that Mrs. Carr put a quantity of arsenic in a pudding by mistake. Gov. Hunthas commuted the sentence of Watt, convicted of murder, to imprisonment for life.
