The Blind Man and the Blind God. BY FREDERIKA BREMER. All ages, all people, have believed in Special Providences. The heathen believed in favorit-Providences. The heathen believed in lavorism exercised by the gods, in their protecting and favouring certain individuals, to the exclusion sion of others. It is the privilege of the Christian to believe in the special providence of a pa-ternal God manifested to every child of man, and which, sooner or latter, during his wandering through the many mansions of existence, will clearly be disclosed to him. God enters by interest of private door to every individual says one of America's most genial writers. So in his heart, so in his house, or outward world. And though that divine visitation does for many persons. in which it is so clearly are several instances in which it is so clearly seen, even here, that we cannot help exclaiming, It is the Lord! Such an instance we would give, in the following story of two yet living in-dividuals. And that the blind god is here made The young Charles A. followed, as physician, with the Swedish army, when that, in the year 1844, with threatening movement entered the valleys of Norway, then resisting the annexation to Sweden resolved upon by the European monarchs at the Congress at Vienna: A dangerous disease of the eyes broke out in the camp. The young and talented physician exerted himself in 1800 walking under shady trees, arm in arm. It was all the patients recovered, but he himself finally caught the disease, and to him alone it proved fatal. No help would help him. His eyeballs was caught the disease, and to him alone it proved fatal. No help would help him. His eyeballs he Swedish army, when that, in the year No help would help him. His eyeballs fatal. No help would help him. His eyebalis and his sight was lost without remedy about five and twenty years of age when he thus was bereft of the sight of the day. He was a young man of the highest promise, hand some in person, ardent, aspiring, and gifted with rare faculties for his profession. He was ambitious; and visions of future fame and greatness had, as brilliant stars, beckoned him onward. had, as brilliant stars, beckoned him onward. To be, from these sunny heights, east down and shut up in the abyss of utter darkness, was a freadful shock to such a mind. It was to be preyed upon itself. And though he grappled sternly with his destiny, bearing without complaint what he must bear, black melancholy
