It so happened that on this day the parliament of Scotland was going to adjourn; a day on which there was always a grand procession, and a general turn out among the gentry. Richard and his Lady now directed their steps to the Parliament. Square. Here all was bustle the Parliament Square. Here all was bustle and magnificence; Dukes and Lords, ladies and gentlemen, all in the most splendid attire, threading their way among the motley crowd; some smart, well dressed gentlemen, arranging their cloaks and swords by the passage way which had given entry to Richard and Jane, most of whom at the sight of our heroine, stood most or whom at the sight of our neronic, should still in admiration. One of them, however, with the trained assurance of a rake, observing her to be very beautiful and a stranger with only one attendant, accosted her in language which made her blush and tremble. Richard's blow reddened with anger as he commanded the offer der to leave the lady alone."

"And who are you my brave fellow?" said the youth, with blood assurance.
"Sarrah!" exclaimed Richard, forgetting his livery. "I am that lady's husband—her servant, I mean." And here he stopped short in confusion.
"Admirable." exclaimed the intruder. "Here sirs, is a lady's lackey who does not know whether he is his mistress's servant or her hus-band; let us give him up to the town guard," So saying, he attempted to push Richard aside and take hold of the lady; but he had not time to touch her garments with even a finger, before her protector had a rapier gleaming before his eyes, and threatening him with instant death if he laid his hand upon his mistress.

At the sight of the steel, the bold youth step ped back, drew his sword, and was preparing to fight, when a crowd collected. His majesrepresentative was at this moment stepping out of Parliament-house; he ordered the officer of his guard to bring the parties before him—he inquired the reason of the disturbance. "Why, here is a fellow, my lord," answered the youth who insulted the lady, "who says he is the husband of a lady whom he intend as a livery man—and a lady, too, the bonniest, I dare say, that has been in Scotland since the days of Queen Magdalene."

"And what matter is it to you?" said the officer in what relation this man stands to his lady? Let the parties come forward and tell heir own story."

The lords in attendance were now gathering around, all eager to see the bonnie lady. Lord Wigton was in the number. When he saw his

His father then got a large dose down the throat of the sheep, and in four hours after it was quietly grazing with the rest of the flock. He and his brother took a gill of the medicine three times a day for about ten days, and no effects of the poison were ever felt by either. He says it has also been very successfully used in snake bites. This remedy is simple, and may be easily obtained by farmers. We would mention a remedy equally simple, and that may be obtained almost every where; especially valuable in snake bites and the bite f poisonous insects, &c. : and that is the common green plantain, which is probably known to every body: for the bite or sting of poisonous insects it is only necessary to take the green leaves and bruise them well: then bind them over the part affected.
