Baron Liking in blacelebrated work on Animal Chemistry, says. "An artificial Digestive Fluid, analogous to the Gastrie Julee, may be readily prepared from the mustice of the stomach of the call, in which yas indicated and digested just in the sume manner as they would be in the human stomach."

Dr. Perestra, in his famous treatise on "Food and Digestive Holland by Fowlers & Wolls, New York, page 35 states the same great fact, and describes the method of preparation. There are few higher authorities than Dr. Pereira.

Dr. Comre, in his valuable writings on the "Physiology of Digestion," observes that "a diminution of the due quantity of the Gastrie Juleeis a prominent and all-prevailing cause of Byspepsia," and he states that "a distinguished professor of medicine in London, who was inguished professor of medicine in London, who was severely afflicted with this complaint, fluiding everything else to fail, had recourse to the Gastrie Julee; obtained else to fail, had recourse to the Gastrie Julee; obtained from the stomach of living animals; which proved completely successful."

Dr. Gasthas, author of the famous works on "Vegetable Diet," says: "It is a remarkable fact in physiology that the stomach of animals, macerated in water, impart to the fluid the property of dissolving various articles of food, and of effecting a kind of artificial digestion of them in no wise different from the natural digestion of them in no wise different from the natural digestion of them in no wise different from the natural digestion of them in no wise different from the natural digestion of preparation. From recent experiments we know that food is dissolved as repidly in an artificial digestive field, prepared from Pepsin, as it is in the natural Gastrie Julee, obtained from the living human stomach and from the matural digestion occurred as perfectly in the artificial as in the natural digestion occurred
