"There is one favorable view of the canvass in Pennsylvania. Gov. Johnston has driven Col. Bigler to make issue with him upon the tariff question, and to take open ground in favor of the law of 1846. Heretofore the game of our opponents in that state has been one of dodging and evading this issue or of gross described. opponents in that state has been one of dodging and evading this issue, or of gross deception in pretending to be of the tariff party. But this pretending to be of the tariff party. But this treacherous family were so basely wicked, this treacherous family were so basely wicked, as they afterwards proved themselves to be, the sult has been, that Johnston is regarded with great favor and popularity in the tariff-loving tottering pillars of their throne would have falregions of iron and coal. Of course in a State len at my command, and buried the crowned election the full benefit of this feeling cannot be traitors beneath their ruins, or would have scatexperienced. But it must essentially increase We long since declared that the issue was fairly made; and the defeat of the Federal par-dom of my dear native land was the only wish of ty has followed upon this issue. It was a source my heart. My requests were of that moderate of most signal defeat, too, in the strongest iron nature which, in the condition of Hungary and counties of the State, in which Abolitionism had no foothold. But this is not to be wondered at :

of our national being. During three centuries twelve Kings of the house of Hapsburg had sworn in the presence of the eternal God, before ascending the throne, that they would preserve our independence and the constitution; and their lives is but a history of perpetual and accursed perjury. Yet such conduct did not weaken our fidelity. No nation ever manifested more faithfulness to their rulers. And though we poor Hungarians made endless sacrifices, often at the expense of our national welfare. often at the expense of our national welfare-though these Kings in time of peace drew their very early hour. When that valuable document came to my hands, a negotiation was pending, having for its object the liberation of Kossuth from the Turkish custody. This consideration induced me to consult confidentially with a number of distinguished citizens, occupying high and exalted stations, whom I new to be the truest and warmest friends of the Hungarian cause and its great leader; and finding that each of them concurred with me in the opinion that the publication of that document at that time might have defeated the object of the negotiation, I informed Governor Ujazi of it whereupon he authorized me to retain in my possession its original until it could be safely published.

This time has now arrived. The great Hungarian leader being already under the protection of the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes, and approaching these by hospitable shores, there is no necessity of with the stars and stripes and stripes of a strong daries; for it was only necessary for our vintor combat such an enemy, we were supported, first, above every dust such an enemy, we were supported, first, above every dust such an enemy, we were supported, first, above every dust such an enemy, we were supported, first, above every dust such an enemy, we were supported and store the countries of the consults the Russians, and to transfer the war to their own soil. But we respected the laws of nations, and stopped our conquering forces on the confines of liberty, which make the child a giant, and increase the stringly by our unshaken confidence in God, whose withing, by our unshaken confidence

Free citizens of North America! you ha given, in spite of these slanders, the fullest syn opportunity to explain to you our motives and conduct, and refute the libels against us; but we said—and how truly your nobleand magnan imous conduct shows it!—that such a nation knows how to defend a just and holy cause, and will give us its sympathy; and this conviction inspired us with more confidence. Oh, that you had been a neighboring nation:—the Old World would now be free, and would not have to endure again those terrible convulsions and rivers of blood which are inevitable. But the end is with Ye great and free people! receive the thanks of my country for your noble sympathy, which was a great moral support in our terrible con-

When the house of Austria sold itself to the Autocrat, we, who were fatigued with our hard-earned victory, but not subdued or exhausted, saw with apprehension the spectre of Russian invasion, an invasion which violated the laws of civilization, the rights of man, of order, and even to that principle which the diplomacy of Europe calls "the balance of power." I could not believe that the governments of Europe would permit this invasion; for I expected they would intervene to effect a treaty of peace, if not so much on our account, yet to prevent Austria bedoming the vassal of Russia—to check the growing strength and influence of the latter power in the East.

The King and royal family granted these requests, appealing to the sanctity of their oaths as a guarantee of their fulfilment; and I, weak that we must fight to saye ourselves from being in myself, but strong through the confidence of my countrymen, and the noble sympathy of the Austrian people, preclaimed everywhere, amidst the raging storm of revolution that "the house of Austria, by its endless acts of injustice and cruelty, and by calling in the aid of a fortien, two saw mills, one of the largest founderies in the West, an extensive rolling mill, and marching town of the largest founderies in the West, an extensive rolling mill, and marching town of the largest founderies in the West, an extensive rolling mill, and marching town of the largest founderies in the West, an extensive rolling mill, and marching town of the sanctity of their oaths as a guarantee of their fulfilment; and I, weak that we must fight to saye ourselves from being struck off the earth as a nation—when the house of Austria, by its endless acts of injustice and cruelty, and by calling in the aid of a fortien, two saw mills, one of the largest founderies in the West, an extensive rolling mill, and marching the fine confidence of my countrymen, and the noble sympathy of the Austria, by its endless acts of injustice and cruelty, and by calling in the aid of a fortien, and would be just to its people."
