Pottoning,—The Chronicle of last evening says that on last Friday evening, a young woman residing in Allegheny City, supposed to be laboring under considerable mental excitement, took a large quantity of arsenic. During the day she a large quantity of arsenic. During the day she complained of feeling unwell; that she knew she was going to die soon; told them where she was going to die soon; told them where she was going to die soon; told them where she wanted to be buried; disposed of her clothing. &c., at which her friends merely laughed. Before evening she purchased a quantity of arsenic and drank it. She instantly became very sick, and drank it. She instantly became very sick, and fortunately vomited a portion of it not her tea, and drank it. She instantly became very sick, and fortunately vomited a portion of the poison inp, but still a considerable quantity remained in hier system, and ever since she committed the rash act, she has been in an almost perfect state of torpor, and scarcely exhibits any signs of life, silthough hopes are now entertained of her receivery.
