FRIDAY MORNING:::::::::DECEMBER River Intelligence, &c. The river is gradually receding at this place. Last evening at dusk there were 51 feet of water in the channel. The opposition between the Wheeling still continues. They start from this city on the same day, vix: Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and generally leave about the same moment. The accommodations of both these boats are excellent, and cannot be surpassed but they must certainly be losing money as running at present. We think, however, that all this difficulty can be amicably settled, so as to prove mutually advantageous to the boats and to the public. Instead of starting out on the same days, let them compromise and arrange it so as to depart on different days, and then we shall have a daily packet line between Pittsburgh and Wheeling. For instance, let the Winchester leave here on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Saturday. By adopting this suggestion, both the owners of the boats and the public will be benefitted. PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY To the Honorable, the President and his Associates, Judges of the Court of Quarter Sessions, &c. &c. of Allegheny County.
The Grand Jury for October Term, 1851, The Grand Jury for October Term, 1851, having concluded the business before them, would respectfully submit to the Court their views in relation to certain subjects connected with the administration of justice, and the general interests of the citizens of Allegheny county. The unusually large number of bills of indictment acted upon at the present term, but too plainly proves that with the rapid increase of our population there is still a corresponding increase of crime; while it cannot be forgotten that with every additional offence committed crease of crime; while it cannot be forgotten that, with every additional offence committed and tried, there is necessarily required an additional amount of time and labor by our Courts, and its attendant expenses to the county; so that whether the subject be viewed by the eye of the moralist; or the economist, it alike suggests the inquiry. Whence the cause, and what the of the many cases brought before us at the present term, it is believed three-fourths were occasioned by the use of intoxicating drinks. Notwithstanding the additional restrictions placed by recent enactments by the granting of licenses believed to be adequate to secure its observance, whenever it shall be universally enforced. The certainty of publishment is the strength of the law, and few will offend when none can escape: name is well often when how can escape; on the contrary where many escape more will be entitled to venture. The continuance of the illegal traffic in order a pirits hitherto is chiefly owing to the uncertainty of punishment which awaited it. This is illustrated by the fact that in many districts of the country, not even a constable's return is made of such dealers; and or others they are very imperfect; while in some others where inlicensed houses are so returned, neither constable nor, any other citizen of the neither constable nor, any other citizen of the district can be got to procure the necessary evidence to convict. Many who would desire to have the traffic in their neighborhood stopped, yet decline to become informers, and depend upon the Court and the law to redress the wrong; like the apprentice boy, who would not take the trouble to learn, because his master was bound in his indentures to educate him.
It is recommended that every constable of the ounty be required to furnish with his return on the first day of each term, the names of witnesses known to him, by whom each offence may be proved; and that he be not discharged from his attendance until he has so done. But as every citizen must bear his proportionate share of the burden of increased taxation consequent upon the violation of the laws; so should every one contribute his aid to diminish it, by seeing that none do escape for want of inwe believe that the people have in their hands We believe that the people have in their hands the remedy by enforcing the laws through the aid of the Court, to restrict the sale of ardent spirits in this county to the few licensed dealers, who are likewise subjects to wholesome restrictions. When this shall be done, the supremacy of the law will be vindicated, vice will be repressed, and crime will be diminished. We cannot omit to notice, but with deep regret, the many instances of early youth, who are implicated with crimes, which should mark the oldestoffenders alone. Their unhappy departure from the path of virtue, perhaps too of-
