Kossuth and Non-Intervention.

The distinguished Hungarian, at the banque given him on Thursday evening last, plainly and onfidently appealed to the People of the United States, for efficient aid to Hungary, in her e forts to establish a republican form of govern ment; and he very clearly proved that the idea of non-intervention in the affairs of other governments, as it has so much been contended for recently, is one utterly at variance with republicanism, with the duty of every civilized gov ernment, and even with the practice of thi government, from the administration of Washington down to the present day. In this speed he exhibits a knowledge of our documentary his tory, and the operations of our institutions, that might put to the blush many men who have been born and reared in our country; and who are even now occupying posts of honor and distinction under our government. He shows us, that, while Washington warned his countrymen tions -as well because of our own weakness, as on account of the unnaturalness of an alliance between republicans and monarchists,—he also says, in one of his letters to Lafayette, "Let us have twenty years of peace, and our country will come to such a degree of power and wealth, that we will be able, in a just cause, to defy whatever power on earth." He shows us that, so long ago as 1818, we declared our determination to sid the South American Republics, even to the extent of taking up arms in their behalf: that Great Britain joined us in this declaration: and that we again, in 1826, in the Congress a Panama, (through Messrs. Anderson and Ser geant,) declared that "the United States would have opposed, with their whole force, the interference of Continental Powers with that strugprinciple of our government. Kossorn argues most powerfully against th States, because it is opposed to the progressiv principle that led to the formation of our government; because it would be doing injustice to the character of Washington to suppose that he referred to the matter in any other point of view than People as strongly as any other that has ever been presented to our consideration: that neiown laws, would at once secure to Hungary that than eight hundred years; and which had never been successfully invaded until the union of the Autocrat of Russia with the House of Hapsburg for the purpose of effecting her subjugation. He quotes the proposition of our revere Washington-which would seem to be as incontrovertible as the most simple proposition in moral philosophy—that "every nation has a right to establish that form of government under which it conceives it can live most happy; and that no government ought to interfere with the internal concerns of another." This is a momentous political truth, not dependent on time for its assertion; but to be declared at all times. and for the benefit of every People. It is the language of our own Declaration of Independence; and unless we believe the fathers of our own glorious government uttered a lie before the world, we are bound, by every consideration of duty, to defend that Declaration against the will of every Tyrant and Despot on the Earth. Considerations of policy may well have affected us in the early part of our career as a People; and we may very properly, while weak, have abstained from asserting it as a world-wide principle: but now no such consideration need affect our course. From a widely scattered People of two or three millions, we are now with tolerable compactness a People of many millions; and bound to every nation of the earth by the ties of reciprocal interests, and the still stronger tie of population. Our numbers have been increased by additions from every nation on earth; and therefore the blood running in the veins of our happy and not flow in sympathy for the struggling sons of freedom in every land. On this point, too, the great mind of Washington is invoked, when he deavor to gain time to your country to settle and mature its institutions; and to progress, without intersuption, to that degree of strength and consistency which is necessary to give it the command of its own the any truly benevolent mind ever ject will be a grand schievement of science. desired strength, or conceived that it could properly be exerted, except for the protection of the weak, and the assertion of doctrines designbeen the idea of Washington when penning those fit of insanity.

That which we claimed to be our right, and which we have declared is the right of every People, is surely not to be regarded as a mere ventionalism, that may be acted upon or not at pleasure. If our declaration is true, this great doctrine is a part of the fundamental law of nations, which no time nor circumstances can affect; and which every government on earth is bound, by the very laws of its own existence, t ee faithfully executed.

Where, then, can we find any warrant for wha ve have long since designated "the cowardly docrine of non-intervention?" Such warrant cannot be found in the practice of any monarchical of crushing every. People who have tried to break the bands of despotism. Shall we, then, who boast of a government more healthful in and coolly tell the struggling millions of mankind, that we cannot aid them in their efforts to be free? - that we feel we are powerful; but our power is the result of a "masterly inactiviour power is the result of a "masterly inactivi-have also been arrested at Rensburg, for having ty" of a state of indifference to the condition of been accomplices in the projected revolt. These nankind, of a disregard for truth, although we profess to be a moral and a Christian People ?-There is not, perhaps, in the entire extent of entiment as this in plain terms; and yet such is actually the doctrine asserted by every man who contends against a plain, positive and direct intervention by our government, on behalf of every People on earth who are living under a form of government sanctioned by themselves, against any and all other governments; and our solemn and resolute, and most effective, protest against any power on earth, that seeks to overome the will of a weak People, destroying their form of government, and making them subservient to a more powerful Nation.

But, some of the nice Whigs, who do not like the smell of tallow, think Mr. Sawyer's hands are greasy, and that his hold will slip .--We hope it may; in fact, we feel confident that it will: but we do not desire that Mr. Sawver should be defeated because he has worked his own way to a nomination that the elite of the party could not get, with all the soft soap they could use. The whig journals receive his nomination very coldly, and appear, disposed to let

He can't be elected; date, the whig leaders will say, "Now, we are clear of him." As we have said, we are sorry for Mr. Sawver, but the result cannot be obviated, and the only thing we can do is to sympathize with him in his unfortunate position as a whig candidate.

The Hungarian Revolt at Rensburg. Under our telegraphic head some days since

A grave event has taken place amongst the Austrian corps d'armés in Holstein. Many of the regiments composing it consist in great part of Hungarians, and amongst them are many young men of noble families, who are compelled which requires the owner of a slave, who desires by the Austrian government to serve as simple to emancipate him, to first place at the disposal soldiers. In spite of the disasters drawn down of the Circuit Court a fund sufficient to transupon unfortunate Hungary by the revolution, these soldiers cannot repress the hatred which animates them, or their desire for a new revolution. The presence in Eugland of the ex-dictator, Kossuth, and his violent diatribes against the Austrian government and dynasty, have greatly to be transported.

atred of the Hungarian soldiers, and an armed evolt, of which the consequences would have seen incalculable at the north, has been on the point of breaking out among them; but it has been prevented by the active surveillance of the superior officers of the Austrian battalions. An government of Europe—for they have, with singular uniformity, asserted their right to interfere with other governments, to the full extent the revolution, was arrested the day before yesterday, by the military authorities of Rensburg He had arrived from London, by way of Paris, under a false name. In his possession were proclamations inciting the soldiers to its operations than any other on earth, quietly revolt, and printed copies of the last public speeches in England by the ex-dictator. In a stratagetic point view, the spot was well chosen. In possessing themselves of the fortress, the conspirators calculated that they would receive the support of a number of the dismissed officers and soldiers f the army of Holstein. A new insurrection in the two Duchies would have opened a vast field to the revolutionary exploits meditated by the European propaganda at London. During the last three days, the electric telegraph has been exclusively occupied in transmitting to Vienna the dispatches of the Austrian commander in chief: even those of the stock exchange could not be sent. On receipt of this deplorable news at Vienna, Gen. de Ramberg, an aid-de-camp of the Emperor, was immediately sent off to examine the affair, and he has already arrived at

> The Coming European Revolution. Kossuth's Next Movements .-- A London leter states that England is dull indeed, and all Europe appears perfectly quiet. But trouble is iaily anticipated in France, and revolutionary ovements are threatened in other countries. The crowned heads of Europe appear to be making active preparations for a long and severe bales of cotton, through direct from Chattanoo political storm. Austria and Prussia are enga, Tennessee, shipped at that place, and traing active preparations for a long and severe deavoring to negotiate large loans, whilst the Czar of Russia is urging the completion of railways, and thousands of carriages for the conveyance of his troops. Every movement looks ominious. The bloody scenes of '48, it is be- tirely destitute. O, the vile wretch! lieved, are about to be re-enacted. The London

It is known that a conspiracy exists in Russia, and the volcanic fire once kindled in France, who can predict when and where it will be quenched? Happily, America cannot be disturbed by any of these predicted events, although her regular trade and commerce may suffer somewhat. Liberty of Peoples will be the universal watchword, and the anticipated strife will undoubtedly be a terrible one; but it will probably be the great struggle of peoples for independence. Every successive week discloses the means and the en by which the work will be carried on. The liberation of Kossuth has hastened the day for this date, and proceed to Belgium, from whence he will watch the course of events in Austria, Hungary and France. He is well aware that his presence in Europe will exercise an all-powerful influence upon the cause of liberty.
