DEATH OF DE. DOANE .- It is our painful duty o announce that Dr. A. S. Doane, health officer of this port, died this meroing at half past six. About a week ago he had occasion in his official capacity to visit an emigrant ship, the Great Westorn, which had arrived at Quarantino with some 800 passengers. He was exhausted by long fasting and fatigue when he went on board, and did not leave until he had directed the re-moval of about 140 emigrants who were infected with ship fever. He spent over two hours between decks, in discharging this dangerous duty, and on the following day was taken seriously ill. He has been steadily growing worse over
