we found ourselves acquainted. I have always thought it one of the highest compliments ever paid me, that Dick Crosby thought me worthy to be know to Miss Neville. We were friends in five minutes. I found the promise of her lovely countenance amply re-deemed by her character. She was frank, ardent and spirited, with a cultivated mind and a neet temper; not to have loved her would have been impossible; and she, besides the natural chickens, nor children.

I supposed, moreover, that Pitts alone poor Grace was languid and listless, and given lo reverie. She would even fall into long fits of musing in company, start when spoken to, droop her fair head, like a snow drop, and sigh. Oh, such sighs! so long, so deep, so frequent, so drawn from the very heart! They the Gassette having spoken favorably of him, the Gassette having spoken favorably of him, and the control of trouble and delay. might, to be sure, have been accounted for by the Gazette having spoken favorably of him, the great and said change in her situation, and the death of her indulgent uncle; but these seemed worn out. I had heard such sighs been according to the Journal, the General has ex fore, and could not help imputing them to a dif-

My suspicions were increased when I found out accidentally that Dick and his donkey traveled every morning three miles to meet just such another Dick and such another donkey, who acted as letter carriers to that side of the vilby noon, in their natural progress, but Graco could not wait; so Dick and the donkey made a short cut across the country to waylay his name-sake of the letter hag, and fetch disappointment four hours sooner. She hesitated a little—
"What do you know of him?" "Oh, he is the proudest stornest, crucles man! it would kill me to see him; it would break my heart if my heart is not broken already."
And then, so inexpressible gush of bitter nected, burst forth. She had been engaged t the only son of the proud and wealthy baronet, covery of her uncle's ruined circumstances, the marriage had been most harship broken off by his commands. She had never heard from Mr was settled. He was expected the next evening ind she sereed to come to us some time in the

I paused a moment at the door, as by some trange counteraction of feeling one does often pause, when strongly interested; and in that moment I caught the sweet notes of La ci darem ment reaugnt cae weer notes of Lact darm, sung by a superbinantly voice, and accompanied by Grace's piano; and instantly the truth fashed upon me, that the old Sir John Gower was gathered to his fathers, and that this was
