Maillefort and the fireman escaped. From a further investigation of the affair, it appears that M. Maillefort in undertaking the blasting, employed two boats, one for the galvanic battery, and the other to contain the pow derr. M. Maillefort guided the former, and hi assistants the latter. Immediately before the explosion, a canister containing 120 lbs. of powler, had been already sunk in the water, by his istants and was fixed on the rock, while an ing the wire, which was attached to the canister of powder in the water. By some mistake, the wire of the canister in the boat, was handed to Maillefort, who, having removed to the proper. distance, then brought the wire in contact with the battery. The consequence was that the pow-der in the bost, exploded, shattering it to atoms; the assistants in it were blown in various dire tions, and two of them were instantly killed. Theodore Loutbard was horribly mutilated, and it is thought that he will not recover. The boat in which M. Maillefort was stationed was considerably shattered. Hereceived several not yet received them, be invited to attend the was considerably mattered.
