The young whigs who are anxious to si in the Legislature, are taking the proper steps to bring themselves before the people. This is right, and we suppose that they hope the legal number of them will succeed in getting the nomination, but we have a very different opinion as to their election. It is somewhat strange, that mong all the persons we have heard mentioned for the office, the name of not one of our late embers has not been uttered. How is this: They were all well behaved gentlemen; extremely quiet and orderly, and never interfered for or against the projects of any portion of the community. They kept their sents in a most exemplary manner during the whole session; never said anything at all, and we think it would be gross ipjustice on the part of the whigs to turn them off. If they had done anything, there might be some reason for the course their party appears disposed to pursue towards them; but we defy any man in Allegheny county to point to a single act that has been passed in the late legislature, that will not prove our members to be a very quiet set of representatives. We are in for Birmingham, Jas. C. Ritchey, M. C. Milligan, them as the whig candidates once more, and we Jacob Smith, Richard Dewhurst, Col. Jas. The Theory and the Practice.

The cures from this medicine have been, and will be, just in proportion to the number of cases in which it is need. Its only mirsculous powers, are those which it possesses from and in common with nature, whose operations it can only assist and hasten. Its action is immediate, and, though caim, energetic. It allays irrination, while it promotes secretion and exerction. It can never fail to palliate, and where a core is possible, it will care. This was the theory of the medicine, as inverted; and experience, in numerous cases of every , principles. See advertisement in another column.
