TWO PLANKS IN THE PLATFORM.

We have said a good deal about the Platform forced upon the Whig National Convention by the delegates in that body from the Slaveholding States. Two of the principal planks in that Platform are the Slavery resolution and the Anti-Kossuth resolution. The Northern Whigs were violently opposed to the Fugitive Slave Law, and the Southern Whigs were of course warmly in fayor of it. The Northern Whigs went in for Kossuth and Non-Intervention on the part of Russia with the affairs of Hungary; while on the other hand the Southern Whigs opposed Kos suth and European freedom. Well, the Whigs of the South triumphed in their Convention over the Whigs of the North, and forced the Slavery and Anti-Kossuth planks into the Whig Platform. That Platform is Gen. Scott's Platform-ho has adopted it, must stand upon it, and defend it, under all circumstances, or violate his honor and the sacred pledge made to his party. Without the adoption of that Pintform, Gen. Scorr never would have been nominated. All his friends from William H. Seward down to Descon White know that fact full well; and yet, strange as it may appear, we find these fanatics now supportpared for them by Southern Slaveholders! The Baltimore, and now dere not utter a word against the Platform. The Deacon is no longer a freeman-he is the servile slave of the South, and fawns upon and licks the hands of those he but recently denounced in language the most emphatic and bitter. FILLMORE soup is too weak to run down hill! or Webster would have beaten him in every Nomination and Resection.—On Thursday

The Whig organs are sadly troubled to find ome subject on which they can get up an excitement in favor of their candidates, but all they have tried, thus far, have proven to be dead weights, and the party is now in a more lamentable condition than it was when the nomination was first made. They have tried every means to get up a fuss in favor of feathers, but none of their efforts work well. They first brought the General out with a big basin of soup in his hand, which they thought would make him popular; it didn't take-the weather is too warm for soup, and the people will not take it in haste anyhow. They next brought him out in the form of a game, he-biddy, dressed him out in the form of a game, he-biddy, dressed party of the nation, in November next. up in full regimentals; but this silly device proved as unfortunate as the soup—it would not take. They then changed the scene, and, in stead of representing the General as a cock-adoodle doo, they put him astride of a male chicken, and represent him as riding to the White House, during which it is supposed he is ed the talents of the most eminent, and the symmaking some remarks in his usual style. The fact is, that Scott stock is low in the market, and there is no prospect of any imshow a downward tendency, and if a change does not take place soon, our neighbor of the Gazette will repudiate Scott us well as the platform. He will act right, according to his nature. in doing so-and, as a friend, we would advise him not to labor any longer on the losing side. THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION.

From our newspaper exchanges from the northern and eastern States, we learn that the Abolitionists, or as some of them chose to call themselves, Prec Soilers, are appointing delegates to the Free Soil Convention, which is to be holden n Pittsburgh on the 11th of August next. This ovement is confined pretty much to the seceon the Slavery Platform prepared by the Whigs | the Pres of the South, and forced upon the late Whig National Convention at Baltimore. HORACE GREE-LEY, who "spat upon" the Whig Platform, and Deacon White, who talks about "repudiating it," should favor the convention in this city .--The movement exactly coincides with their vicws.

BACKING UP ONE'S OPINION.

The following appears as an advertisement in the New York Herald. It will afford an opportunity for gasceous Whige to risk a little of their spare change:

The Ontario (N. Y.) Repository, a grave, staid, and consistent organ of what are denominated silver grays, holds open the door and bids the Tribune and its tribe to walk out of the church at once. Thus: "It is the privilege of the Times and the Tri-
