The Cazette of Wednesday, had a curious article on the Presidential question. It was curious because it is one of those articles that editors will sometimes write "a purpose" in order to say something, and afterwards may be sorry for their folly. Our neighbor starts out with the see, passing through our city, a throng of travel following quotation from the Post:

ng. We hope he will not withdraw." chances are that Gon. Scott will withdraw before at once, our Pittsburgh and Stoubenville, and the election, and we defy the Gazette to show any good reason why he should not save himself by backing out. But we will wait a little while for his reasons, and at present give a lew of the words," he utters on the four lines copied from

"Nothing would better please the Post, than for General Scott to withdraw from the contest, but we cannot see what the editors expect to gain by fabricating and publishing such redicu-lous statements."

The Gazette calls our paragraph a fabrication. There is no fabrication about it. We believe all we have said; and if the editor has the humans feeling we give him credit for, he should call a public meeting of the whig party at once, in consider the propriety of repudiating Scott. He knows that he is, to use a common remark, a can be batched from his nomination. The editor is already preparing to back out from his aupport of Scott. He says;

We believe Gen. Scott will carry Pennsylva nia, but we by no means underrate the enemy we to save himself bereafter. We have no malicious desire to annoy our neighbor on the presidential question; but when bill which the Gazette thinks should have been he commences whistling to keep his courage up, he must not attempt to whistle the democrats down the wind with false notes. When he will Louis, thus making the whole country pay an recent settlement of the slave question—both explain to us why the following seventeen whig members of Congress, and the great Premier, bolt the nomination, we will have something more to say: DANIEL WEBSTER, OF MASSACHUSETTS,

These must be our four main trunks. From them will spring many branches, and we shall stand as the nucleus of the grand system of Railroads, pouring into our midst a constant stream of wealth, and busy times for all. It cannot be otherwise. Experience has proved it to be the result everywhere else, it will inevitably be the result here. Let our citizens then step forward and sustain this noble enterprise—the Allegheny Valley Rail road, by their liberal subscriptions; so that as soon as the officers have the line prepared for tting, not a single day may be lost in commen-

It is now evident to every attentive reader the "Old Gazette," that the editor has made up "bad egg," and that nothing good or profitable his mind to exterminate the snage, if he cannot defeat Pierce. He thinks, however, that we are not pleased with his determination to run Scott upon the snng, and would desire him to change the subject. In this conclusion he is very much mistaken. It provided that $75,000 should be Union where steamboats are more heavily taxed than in St. Louis; yet, notwithstanding the exthe people should make it a present of $75,000. The Gazette had better try again, and start some more plausible humbug than the saug.

Before the assemblage of the Whig National Convention, the Whigs of the North boasted that they had not only the strength of numbers to nominute Gen. Scorr, but that they were determin Sharpsburg. From that point to Kittanning, it liked it or not. They claimed that they could like P. Mangun, the first the furious foe of all still an open question as to which side will be elect Gen.
