Mr. Flanegin argued with his honor. Mr. Black said that if there were any doubts in the case they should be weighed for the benefit of their client. Mr. Magraw could suggest a case where, unless the evi-dence on both sides were heard, great injustice would be done. Suppose, he said, one man shoot another, who fell dend, and that his friends, Messra. Irwin, Black and Flonegin, had seen the deceased running after the defendant to take his life. Should not their evidence be received as well as the person who saw him shoot? To do otherwise would be to commit a monstrous injustice.

Mr. Irwin cited a case in 2d Achmead, where the Court declided that they would admit a prisoner to bell unless a clear case of murder in the first degree were made out against him.

Mr. Magraw desired to prove the condition in which Coch ran was at the time, and that his meeting with Jewell, Gaw,

Mr. Figneriu would admit that it was. Mr. Flanegin would samit that it was. In a further hearing to day.
