screws have lately broken loose, and the secret councils of the party are very much divided .-It is a difficulty originating between the old whigs and the young whige. It appears that the old 'uns, on account of "age being bonorable," evinced a disposition to take all the honor of the campaign to themselves. This 'arrangement the young 'uns would not agree to and they forthwith took the preparatory steps to sat up for themselves. Hence the organization of the Young Men's Scott Club.

They had a meeting the other evening a Splanc's Buildings, and their differences ran to such an extent that to avoid using clubs, the clubs separated and held their deliberations in separate rooms. We understand that the old 'uns were extremely angry, and called the young 'nus the "Star Chamber" portion of the party;
