At the age of 14, by one of those chances which are never wanting to predestined abilities, she revealed talents already ripened into form, and saved the fortune of the Manager of the Grand Opera at Prague. The prima donna had fallen ill, either really or by one of those caprices to which lyric organizations are extremely subject; the prospects of the season were compromised, the "impresario" ruined. Malemoiselle Sontag performed the part of the princess in by one of his acquaintances for what he really "Jean de Paris," in the place of the actress then | was; a young man of quality. It is scarcely in vogue. It may be said that she played it entirely in the ancient style, elevated on a cothurnus like that of the Greek or Roman tragedians. In order to give her the requisite tallness, they made her wear red heels, four inches in height; but for the voice and the perfection of manner, there was no need of artificial aid. Exuberant inices filled the veins; it was an intoxication of music, poesy and passion. A young girl of the North, frank and fair-complexioned, transported from the mists of Germany into that warm and radiant atmosphere, under the fire of those dark pupils of the ardent South, surcharged with light and love into that world of graceful license icknowledging no other law than its own pleasure, would assuredly run considerable risk.

At length a concession was made to the repeated entreaties of the manager Barbaja; Henrietta Sontag appeared in the Italian Opera, not at Naples but at Vienna. It was there that she performed for the first time with Lablache and Rubini, those two celebrities of song whom she was to meet at a later period in Paris. The threshold of her dwel ling was constantly beset with aspirants to her avor, who were invariably and mercilessly dismissed. A young man of the highest rank could find no other way of approaching the intractable ongstress, but by hiring in her house as a cervant. He remained thus for several months, oncealed beneath his livery, silently enjoying the furtive happiness of sometimes seeing her whom he loved; of hearing her delicious voice: of inhaling, from the depths of his hiding place, the air through which she passed, modest and adiant with beauty, only too happy that he had the privilege of executing the orders she gave him with all the earnestness and zeal of impassioned love. The lectrast of Chile.—The increase of crime in this city and vicinity is truly alarming. Even while our Court and Grand Jury are in session, investigating several shocking murders, our streets are stained with the blood of another human being, who has been hurried into eternity by a gang of ruthless radinans. At such a moment, when murder while abroad, and human life is held so cheap as to be almost weekly sacrificed to unhallowed passions, it is no time for leniency or bearance. We require for our protection as a community, that the stern demands of the law should be complied with—that examples should be made of those who have violated the sanctuary of human life. The Judge, Jury and Prosecuting Attorney of the present court have all some and harsh duties to perform, but we hope they will not shrink from them. The community look to them for protection; our city must be rid of the foul disgrace of these frequent murders; regues and rodinans must learn that they cannot ply their nefarious trade with impunity in our midat. The Court may be assured that the public will sustain the vigorous and firm application of the law, at a time when it is so much needed.

We find the above in the Gazette of vesterday.

The proposition was repeated to Roedel, but he refused, and gave his testimony before the jury, which body, we presume, will return true bills to-day.

Thousands of individuals are cursed with grovious co nints which they inherit from their parents. The use of he Yellow Dock and Airsopavilla will prevent all this, and saves west amount of misery, and many valuable lives, for it thoroughly expels from the system the latent time, which is the seed of disease, and so takes off the curse by which the sine or mistrytimes of the parents are so often visited upon their innocent offspring.

Parents owe it to their children to guard them against the effects of malagies that may be communicated by descent,
