It appears that Walthour, on Christmas day, arrested a drunken man in the streets of M'Keesport, and was taking him to the lock up, when Ketchum interfered, with the intention of rescuing the prisoner. The Constable struck Ketchium on the head with a mace or cane; after this Ketch. um wentaway. He returned, however, shortly afterwards; he had had the wound on his head dressed, and came to wards Walthour with the intention, apparently, of assaulting him with a poker which he had in his hands. Ketchum was arrested and placed in the lock up, where he died in the course of the day.

A series of resolutions have been offered in the Virginia fluence of such excellent characters is very great in any community; and so indeed it ought to be.

Now for an example: A malefactor is convicted. This alone evokes the active sympatry I speak of. The scripent that has stung society has been folled, buffled, caught, and caged. Now the doves begin to reason; and how is this once puts himself in the place of the malefactor. He thinks how foulf he would feel under the circumstances. What awful temptation must have sprung upon the convict, and like a lion wanguished his good and plous resolutions are registance to temptation could have time to been. What discollect, on Saturday they give two performances which BAILY & BROTHER. Winchester, G. D. Moore, Wheeling, Allegheny, Batchelor, Chedinati. Helen Mar, Cux, Zanesville. ABOVE NINTH, ILADELPHIA like a lion vanquished his good and plous resolutions are resistance to tempiation could have time to begin. What distrees of mind—what reportance—what terror, would fill his own heart, and what remorse would tear it under the circumstances; and various other interesting and pretty things—all which you may see in perusing well written tragedies.

Now here is a blunder made at the very start. Why, the remorse that such a character would feel—the law of that man's nature—precludes the possibility of him in such mannet offending. His heart is no exponent of the felor's bosom; his thoughts and feelings are not the felor's thought and feelings; far from it. This very exhibition of bastard sympathy, of wrong reasoning, the hardened convict scorns and laughs at. He cannot even understand it all. He thinks if must be "something funny." Virtue and goodassorted, &c. &c.

manufacturer, after texting the pearl in the most thorough and trying manner, has come to the conclusion that it is one of the very best materials for Planokeys known, and more over not liable to wear out, even with the severest usage.
The public is respectfully invited to call and examine this elegant specimen of American skill. Speaking of these Planos, the in his hand, all is right for the present—but if he has not got the right kind of a book in his hand, he had for better be asleep.

Those traily great and good men who compiled the criminal code of Pennsylvania, set out by saying that crime was provented more by the mildness and certainty of the law, than by its saverity. They accordingly framed the mildset criminal code of laws on earth. They were wise men they knew the past, but could not know the future, accordingly they have the past, but could not know the future, accordingly they have the past, but could not know the future, accordingly they have the past, but could not know the future, accordingly they have the past, but could not know the future, accordingly they have a commonwealth has, from time to time, surrendered fey various acts of Assembly—and forms of practice, and indicial proceedings, those rights which, in the Over and Terminer, she once possessed—intil I know not what she has left to herself to yield, in such case, unless it be ompaned the prisoner on trial as juror in his own case, and then permit him to be sworn as a witness in it—And after all is over, the slightly. And with the very best of clerks to keep the record from error, I confess it costs this court far more anxiety to see and be sure that the record eccret and free from all accidental error than it does to try the case.

THE peculiar improvement in the construction of this Mastress is, that all the during and heavy wooden framework is entirely dispensed with, and its place supplied by a lighter and much more durable frame. The springs are all connected by harness leather hinges, securely rivetted, rendering it impossible for a single spring to fall down or get out of place, and making a Bed so elastic that any park may be raised or bent up, and is thus admirably fitted to the wants of the sick or asthmetic, who may require a sitting posture. It has all the luxurious softness of the best feather bed, with the lightness and facility of handling of the common hair materess.
