SHEVEYOR GENERA

PORTER BRAWLEY:

THE NEW POST-MASTER GENERAL. It gives us pleasure to transfer to our columns, from the New York Herald, the following sketch of the new Post-Master General. It says the Hon. James Campbell, of Pennsylvania, selected by Gen. Pierce to preside over the Post Office Department, will, we do not hesitate to predict, prove one of the best selections that could have to be the most laborious department of the government, with its thirty thousand appointments, and its constantly increasing patronage, improvements, and the accumulating wants of the whole community. The public interests pertaining to it are eminently progressive; and they are interests, too, about which the American people are perhaps more tenacious than those connected with, and controlled by, any other branch of the government. To administer its duties with success and general satisfaction, requires constant vigilance, untiring industry, much legal knowledge and experience, and in its practical aspects, firmness of purpose, well tempered with courtesy of manner and sound discretion. Upon the dis-ment greatly depends the popularity or unpopularity of the entire administration. The important experiment of low postage, as well as other ted in the lonely guiches and solitary outposts matters of reform, renders it peculiarly a res. of that region. THE LATE RAILROAD ACCIDENT. The late railroad accident on the Pennsylvania road, near Newton Hamilton, Mifflin county, is creating considerable excitement in the Eastern part of the State. The Item, of Harrisburg, publishes the following particulars:-

The survivors are more of least induction the scalding and steam—the entire contents of the folier escaping into the car, which was ledged immediately over the engine. The cause of the stoppage of the freight train at that spot was not from want of fuel, but from the bursting of one of the holler flues, a matter which was beyond control. The accident resulted from the negligence and cardessness of the conductor, Wm. Musser or Mercer, who being an hour alread of the time of the passenger train, had ample time to make every arrangement to stop the train following him. Mr. James S. Mr. King then made a written demand for his immediate discharge. The answer to this demand was a reference to the Hanoverian Government, to which Mr. Schmidt was to be delivered. Mr. King then addressed a letter to the chief Burgermeister of Bremen, requiring his discharge, alleging that he had nothing to do with Hanover, and that the government of Bremen would be held responsible y the United States.
