Now, a few words about the right of way. That such a right of way across Virginia will be granted, the road being pressed, no rightninded man can for a moment doubt. A right of way, however, is wholly unnecessary for the of way, however, is whelly unnecessary tor inc purpose of building the road or making it. It The prosecution of the work, east and west County Commissioner, J. L. Smith; Auditor, is a matter of facility, of convenience-nothing more. But the right of the owners of land to build a railroad on it is as absolute, as perfect; in all respects, as it can be made by any special legislation whatever. Special legislation may give corporate privileges; that is, may invest a number of individuals collectively, as one, with some of the rights belonging to natural persons. An individual, owning the land across Virginia, from the Pennsylvania line to the Obio river, has a full, perfect, indefensible right to make a rail. road over it as any company, foreign or domestic, can be invosted with by any legislation whatever. Special legislation would not, in such cases, give rights, but rather give facilities for the exercise of them. One or more persons, Virginians, thus, all the land. The laws of Virginia in force, provide that they may, if they please, make a railroad over them. Where their road will cross the highway, they have only to ask the Justice's Court of the County to make an order for thus crossing it. The moment the order is made, (as it would be here on the instant,) the right to build and work the road is as complete under the law already existing in Virginia, as it can be made by any special legislation. Hence, we find, as mentioned in Saturday's Dispatch of this 'city, in a communication signed a "Virginian," that giant efforts were made by the Wheelingites,
