THE CELESTIALS AND THE YANKEES

China, to the extraordinary and good-tempered American, has always been looked to with anxious eyes; and without such governmental aid as has been rendered British subjects by their government, commercial relations of an extensive and highly important character have sprung up between the citizens of this country and the inhabitants of the Chinese empire.

The late news brought to us from China reported that the American Commissioner, Mr. Mansfield, together with the English and French Ministers, had conferred, or were about to confer, with the combined naval forces of the three nations, in support of the present British fleet, which is now anchored in the harbor of Peking.

It is estimated that during the last twelve months there have been imported into New York from England and Scotland, 100,000 tons of bituminous coal, which at $10 a ton would amount to $1,000,000.

A letter from Major John C. Henshaw of the United States army, dated at Fort Arbuckle, on the 10th inst., contains the report of the attack on Fort Arbuckle in October. There had not been even the semblance of a hostile force shown by any of the tribes that had habitually visited that fort since its establishment.

There are three things a woman cannot do: pass a bonnet shop without looking in; pass a book store without touching a book; and pass a piece of land without inquiring how much it is worth.

It is stated that the Massachusetts Glass Company, which has been organized in that State, is about to begin operations in the manufacture of glass bottles and jars.

Mr. Walker's views in regard to our trade with China and Asia are fully set forth in his several Treasury Reports, and especially in that of December, 1894. In that Report, Mr. Walker expressed his views on this subject with the following prophetic remarks:

Our ports upon the coast will close upon both sides of the continent, and the commerce of the Pacific will be confined to the coast of the United States. The Pacific will be a great sea, and the United States will be a great power.

It is stated that the Commissioner of the General Land Office has issued a notice requiring the owners of certain lands in the State of New York to file their claims with the Commissioner.

THE NEW YORK AND ENGLAND COMPANY

The New York and England company, according to the terms of its reorganization with the Central railroad company, virtually abandoned one hundred and thirty miles of its line, and they are now being sold to the British government.

Messrs. Chamberlain & Hester, of New York, state that their consent has been asked and obtained to allow their oiler ship, Seymour, to be chartered to the British government.
