Address

OF THE STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The approach of our General Election is a fitting occasion to appeal to you on behalf the interests the success, and the principles of our common party.—The most important offices in the Judicial Legislative and Executive branches of our State Government are to be filled, and it becomes the paramount duty of every Democrat attached to the principles of his political faith and anxious for its honor and prosperity, to devote his exertions, his influence, and his vote to the cause.

We are proud of our State nominees. The State ticket is worthy your support. It comprises a group of honorable and honored names, and combines an aggregate of talent, character and merit, rarely, if ever, surpassed by any State nominations in the annals of our truly Democratic State.

The Hon. John C. Knox was nominated with an unanimity that fairly represented the universal respect for his judicial and personal character that pervades all sections of our Commonwealth. Judge Knox was born in Tioga county, on the 18th of February, 1817, and admitted to practice in the courts of that county in June, 1839. His success, due to his talents, energy, and learning, was immediate and brilliant. In January, 1840, he was appointed Deputy Attorney General of Tioga, and continued in that office for three years. In 1845 he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected in 1846. At the commencement of the session of 1847, he received the unanimous vote of the Democratic members of the house of Representatives for Speaker. Judge Knox's retirement from legislative life was almost immediately followed by an invitation from Gov. Shunk to accept the office of President Judge of the Xth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Westmoreland, Armstrong, Indiana, and Cambria. He was commissioned on the 10th of April, 1848, and unanimously confirmed by the Senate. In October, 1851, he was elected President Judge of the XVIIIth Judicial District, over his competitor, Judge Buffington, by nearly 2000 majority, and in May, 1853, appointed to the Supreme Bench by Gov. Bigler.

The rising and conspicuous career of Judge Knox is the evidence and result of merit. He is a learned lawyer, a noble jurist, an honest man. In the North-ern and Western counties, where his judicial character is best known, our correspondence attests that his present nomination will be approved by an unexampled vote. Although his professional and legislative career proved him to be a devoted student and valuable member, it is as a judge that he has been most distinguished. He is just and fears not. In his hands, the scales of justice are held firmly and even. The confidence of the people whose interests have been confided to his judicial care, is unbounded and the respect felt for the profound and just jurist is only equalled by esteem for his private virtues, unspotted integrity and amiable manners.

The Hon. Ephraim Banks, the Democratic candidate for Auditor General of Pennsylvania, is of Scotch Irish descent, and of good, old revolutionary stock. His grandfather, James Banks, was a Scotchman, and fought at Braddock's Field under Washington, and afterwards resided in York county, where his father, Gen. James Banks, was born. His grandfather, with his family, about 1772, moved to Lost Creek Valley, then Cumberland, afterwards Mifflin, now Juniata county, Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather, Robert Nelson, was an Irishman, and lost a valuable estate lying in Juniata county, by his devotion to the cause of Independence.

The families on both sides, participated in the revolutionary struggle, and did service for the country. Ephraim was born and raised upon the land purchased by his grandfather Banks, in 1772. The family business was farming, and he was instructed in that business, and followed it until he was about sixteen years of age. Having obtained the best education the country and village schools in the neighborhood afforded, and acquired some knowledge of mathematics and surveying, he practiced surveying occasionally with the then Deputy of the county, and was afterwards engaged in store-keeping, and other pursuits, until he was appointed Prothonotary and Clerk of several of the Courts in Mifflin county, by Gov. Findlay, in 1818. Before, and about the time of his appointment, he held several military offices, and among them the office of Colonel. Finding, by the opportunity the office of Prothonotary afforded him, that the legal profession was better suited to his taste than any other business he could qualify himself for, he read law, as a student, under the direction of the late Alexander K. Anderson, Esq., one of the most accomplished members of the bar in the county, and was admitted to practice during the administration of Gov. Heister.

In 1826, he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, and was twice re-elected. For the first year of his service he was on the Committees on Estates and Escheats, and on the Judiciary, and for the second and third years, chairman of the Judiciary Committee. For the period of his service in the House, no one enjoyed more of the kindness and respect of his fellow members. While acting independently himself, according to his own judgments he always treated respectfully the opinions as action, of others.

During his term of service in the House, he was associated with Judge Morgan, Cadwallader Evans, and John Blair, who had been members before and as far back as 1793, and others of equal capacity and much experience, and enjoyed their favor personally and politically.

He was afterwards elected a member of the Convention to amend the Constitution of the State, and was a zealous and efficient reformer of that talented and respected body. Perhaps no member stood fairer with his fellow members than did Ephraim Banks. If he was not so brilliant as some, he was always judicious. If he did not startle his friends by scientific lations of wit and exhibitions of learned knowledge he never failed to sustain himself as a man of mind and manners.

From the time he served in the Reform Convention until his present term of service as Auditor General commenced, he devoted himself to the business of his profession as a lawyer, and the affairs of the community in which he resides as a useful citizen; and during the period of his service as Auditor General, he has proved himself to be efficient and faithful to the interests of the Commonwealth, as well as courteous and pleasant in references to business transactions.

Mr. Banks is a man of family. His eldest son is a successful lawyer in Hollidaysburg. His second son died in San Francisco, in October, 1848, where he had located as a lawyer, with very flattering prospects. His third son was in all the battles near the city of Mexico, under Scott and Worth, and is now a practising physician. He has other and younger children.

The leading traits of his character are caution and firmness of purpose. His mind is clear and logical, and he is always ready to prefer that which is practical and useful to that which is speculative and uncertain.

Hon. J. Porter Brawley, the candidate for Surveyor General, was born in Randolph township, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, on the 5th of November, 1819.

He entered Allegheny College in the Spring of 1837, where he graduated with the highest honors of that institution in 1840. On leaving College, he was elected to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania in 1841, and re-elected in 1842. Mr. Brawley was a very active and efficient member of the House while he occupied a seat in that body, though he was the youngest member on the floor. During his first year of service, he was Chairman of the Committee to apportion the State, and, for the second year a member of the Congressional Apportionment Committee, both of which positions were exceedingly important and laborious. He was also Chairman of the Committee on Pensions and Gratuities during his second term. In 1844, he was nominated for Senator in the Crawford County Convention, but declined the nomination to the District Convention, after having been ushered in by his friends through two hundred and eighty-seven ballots in order to compromise the conflicting claims of the two counties. In 1847 he was nominated for the Senate, and elected by a large vote.—He maintained a very honorable standing in that dignified body. He was a member of the Committees on the Judiciary, Chairman of the Committee on Corporations, on Estate and Escheats, and on the Militia. He was an industrious and talented Senator warmly devoted to the interests of his constituents.

In the session of 1849, Mr. Brawley was nominated by the Democratic members of the Senate for Speaker of that body, but was defeated by a single vote.

In 1850 Mr. Brawley was nominated by the Democratic State Convention for the office of Surveyor General of the Commonwealth, and was elected. He was again nominated for the same office by the late 4th of March Convention, and is at present the Democratic nominee. He has made an able, industrious and faithful officer, and has given universal satisfaction to all who have had business with the office.

Mr. Brawley, after he had left College, commenced the study of law under Judge Church, and was admitted to the Bar in 1843, at the age of 24 years. He was appointed Deputy Attorney General, and was a faithful officer. When the administration changed he resigned.

Mr. Brawley is a firm and unflinching Democrat. During his legislative career, although a young man, he did not, we believe, give a single vote that incurred the disapprobation of the party. He is affable and popular in his manners, and is possessed of great kindness and generosity of disposition. As a man and a republican, he has always enjoyed the friendship and confidence of those with whom he has been intimately associated.

The Hon. Thomas H. Forsyth, the nominee for Canal Commissioner, is known throughout the length and breadth of Pennsylvania. There are few men living of more stern integrity, honest purpose and active experience.

Mr. Forsyth is now about 50 years of age. He was born in Bucks county, where he was brought up to the business of a carpenter and builder, and continued to reside there until he was about 23 years of age, when he removed to Philadelphia. During the whole time of his residence in the city, he has been actively engaged in his occupation, except while absent as a member of the Legislature. The first important public trust to which he was called, and held for many years, was the office of Controller of Public Schools. He was afterwards a Commissioner of his District, and in 1841 was elected a member of the House of Representatively, and was re-elected in 1846. In 1847 he was elected to the State Senate, and re-elected in 1850.

No man who ever occupied a seat in the Legislature, combined his terms of service with more of the respect of his colleagues and the confidence of the public than Mr. Forsyth.

His reputation for integrity has never been excelled, and it is now almost proverbial throughout the State. In the discharge of his duties in every public trust he has filled, and in earnest endeavor to to promote the interests of his constituents, he has been rewarded by no narrow or sectional considerations, and has been governed only by a strict sense of duty.

His thorough acquaintance with the interests of Pennsylvania, his practical business knowledge, and his inflexible honesty, eminently qualify him for the post of Canal Commissioner.

It is the duty, as it is the interest, of every true Democrat to support the nominations of his party.—Our obligations are mutual and common; upon no other basis can any party enjoy prosperity and harmony. The time-honored motto of "Principles, not men," inculcates a practical lesson that is as sound as it is valuable.

It is in no sectional spirit that we refer to the proud station of Pennsylvania in the Democracy of the Nation. She stands firm and true to the Constitution, the Union, and the Party.

Our State Conventions convene in harmony and end in unanimity. Secession and schisms are unknown to them. The Democracy of Pennsylvania is annually becoming more powerful as the mineral wealth of the State is developed; more united as the fatal influences of discord in other States is manifested; and more attached to its principles as experience more and more demonstrates that they form the true foundation of the science of civil government.

We repeat, every true Democrat will support the regular nominations of his party. Its discipline, reputation and success require it. Collateral issues, abstract questions in morals, and the multiform topics always agitated among the people never are to be introduced into politics. It has always been a fatal mistake. The irrelevant issues of a Tariff, a Bank of the United States, and other such questions, have been from time to time handed up to the tender mercies of political excitement, and in every instance the result was and ever will be, inevitable defeat. Such measures should be submitted to the intelligence of the people's representatives, and if wise, will always ultimately triumph. The Democratic party never has justified, and never will sanction, the importation of any contraband issue into the heated precincts of the election.

The Democratic party is now formidable and invincible. The administration of the good and great statesman at the head of the Republic is founded upon the wise principles of his Inaugural Address, and must redound to the honor, prosperity and progress of the country. Already has a leading and brilliant point in the Inaugural Address of President PIERCE been nobly vindicated under its influences. The inviolability of an American citizen abroad has been asserted and maintained successfully in the face of Europe.

The financial character and condition of Pennsylvania have been elevated, and all the great interests of the State have been maintained under the Democratic administration of Gov. Bigler. The pursuits of industry are rewarded with prosperity, and Pennsylvania is fast advancing to the rank of the first in population and wealth, as she is now the first in political power.

Democrats of Pennsylvania! We earnestly ask you to remember the glorious majority of 1852. Shall it be diminished, or shall we repeat it, and repeat it as often as the banners of our beloved party are opened to the breeze? Devote one day to maintain its principles and success. Vote, and vote to the ticket, the whole ticket, and nothing but the ticket.

WM. L. HIRST, President.

WM. CURTIS, Secretary.
