We gave a short account of his opposition to the incorporation of the village he lives in, with our own condusions, founded on that opposition. We stated facts, about the liquor traffic about his door, the state of echools there, with other particulars of his history, all public except one. We supposed that if he condesceaded to notice us at all he would defend his actions, and days our conclusions.

When the Gazette made its first denial of our facts, we supposed the califor ind ected unalvisedly, and so we just repeated what we had said, never dreaming that a proof of the facts would be called for. We should as much have been expected to be asked to prove our statements, as to prove that the Boctor does live in Wilkinsburg, which it is possible he may next deny; we expected the Doctor to defend his acts, not deny them, but as the Gazette this week keeps up its wholesale denial, we must conclude they are indefensible, and with very little time for such an operation, we proceeded to collect what proof was come-at-able on short notice. and then go to Copiapo on the 15th, from thence to Callao, and probably from that place to Aus-

The once lovely Zulime, passing through so many roverses and misfortunes, returned, in her old age, to New Orleans—her old home—and passed a peaceful and happy life, in the family of her son, respected and beloved for her many virtues. She died at the age of seventy-eight, the youngest of her family—two of her sisters having attained their ninetieth year, a longevity common to the old inhabitants of Louisiana, and particularly of those born on our own sencoast.

A suit was brought for this purpose in the civil courts of the Territory, and judgment was obtained against De Grange. In the meantine, Clark had advanced in years and honors. The gallant youth of 1802 had become the ambitious politician and millionaire. As the popular man of a powerful party, he was sent a delegate of the Territory to Congress. Here he soon forgot the poor Creole girl, and began to meditate a more brilliant marriage connection. The object of this aspiration was the lovely Miss Caton, of Maryland, a grand-daughter of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, who afterwards became the Maryland, a grand-daughter of Charles Carroll, and Clark's fine manners, distinguished position, and great wealth, no doubt, readered him quite a desirable match for so brilliant and accomplished a beauty.
