The sir to be warmed is taken directly from the outside of the building in all cases, thus insuring a supply of pure, wholesome air for bereithing, and the other important functions required by the human system—the caygen is not affected, nor the organic matter in the air carbonized by coming in contact with air over-heated surface; as with other ing in contact with air over-heated surface; as with other troaces, and headaches and other disagreeable senantions are prevented by this measure—and in consequence of the warm air not making too large demands upon the lungs and evaporating surface of the skin, to supply the meisture which it has lost in passing over a red het surfaces. In proof of this, attention is called to the certificates of Professor Silliman, of Yale College, New Haven, and to those of other scientific persons who have examined this subject.
