[CONCLUDED.] "True honest manhood and womanhood," replied Louisa, with dignity, "are the best and noblest gifts God gives us; and I hope I have at ough of the one to recognize the other, though it be beneath a roof a little lower than For the first time in his life the young man had spoken depreciatingly of his station and its pleasures; and for almost the first time in her life Louisa had uttered a sentiment worthy of her real inture.
The morning looked unpromising, but about noon, the clouds broke up, and at one o'clock the sun shone bright and clear.

Mrs. Goodhae made herself merry, when she saw her daughter sewing the gingham apron; but her estimate of the Armstronga was modi-fied somewhat when she learned that Mrs. Jackpale, thoughtful boy, had been unusually active and lively. Sally had sung "When I can read my title clear," in a key louder than common, and the mother seemed quite rejuvenated, acco. as she beat eggs and rolled sugar, and assorted spices and plums. Only Warren was silent, seeming scarcely soberly glad. Sally, who was seeming scarcely soverly guan carry, who was not much given to sighing, rallied him repeatedly; but though he said nothing was the matter. and he was sure he didn't see what they found Shortly after sunset all was in readiness. """ O, Sally! there is some one coming—a lady, somebody I don't know," called out Moses from his station in the window.

"Well, well, child, come and set down," said her in the rocking chair, she untied her veil, offered her big fan, and, in various ways, atrove so cordially to entertain her, that she quite forgot her intention of making excuses and returngot her intention of making excuses and returning home. Moses brought her a bright red apple, and Sally showed her the garden, though there was nothing in it to see, she said—and sure subjust there were but a few faded holly-hocks and marigolds; but the kindly spirit was the same as if there had been ever so many flowers; and, recognizing this, Louisa's heart softened more and more, till before an hour had gone, she laid saide all restraint and affection, nd sven outvied Sally in merry laughter and talk. Everything was so new and strange, and made so welcome and so at home, she ran about the house like a pleasant child. An humble dwelling it was, consisting of but three rooms ly neat and clean, and even displaying some little attempts at taste and ornament The low ocilings and rough walls were whitewashed, the window curtains were snowy white, and a plaided home-made carpet covered the floor of the best room; and maple boughs, now But that which made the room chiefly attractive on the night I speak of, was the table. How pretty the nink china (which Mrs. Armstrong has had ever since she was married) showed in the ing. In the kitchen, the tea-kettle was already steaming, the chickens were rosting, and the cream bisouit were moulded and ready to bake. At eight o'clock the guests were assembledneight or ten in all—young men and women, neighbors and friends.
With right good will they set to work, and very fast, despite the mirth and jesting, the streaked. and red, and golden apples, were pealed and sliced, ready for the drying.

It happened to Louisa and Warren to sit together, and it also happened they spoke so low the rest of the company were not much edified At half-past nine came Parson Long. The work was so nearly done, it was not tho't worth while for him to join in it; and so, seated in the best chair, and slowly waving the turkey-feather volatile party before him. At supper, it chances pink dress, or whether it was that he learned the But I cannot linger over that good supper, uisa said was the best that ever was prepared; nor over the merry-making after-wards, which lasted till twelve o'clock, nor can describe the pleasant walks homeward, which, In a day or two, that young lady tied on her black apron again, and went over to hirs. Armstrong's to learn how to make the cream biscuit; e lane to her own home-and that was the baginning of many such visits and many such Before the apples were half dry, Pastor Long paid a pastorily visit to Mrs. Armstrong's. He had been intending to do so for a long time, he said, but there were always so many things to after this, Sally slopped at Mrs. Goodhue's gate, one Sunday morning, to speak to Louisa. She was going to teach in the Sunday school—she thought she ought to do some good as she went slong. But Miss Goodhue did not join her; she went to church in the morning, and in the af ternoon she liked to walk in the fields and woods,

The circumstances of the case are briefly Mr. P. J. Smyth, of New York, (himself a rebel of 1848.) went to Van Dieman's Landwith the express mission to receus some one or more of the Irish State prisoners. Nothing could have been easier than to escape, if they could have ness, and control their own destiny under Providence; and England and France have no more right to interfere than we have to control the before the proper authority, and present them-selves to be taken into custody. The parole is to the effect that they would not escape from the NEW YORK ITALIAN OPERA COMPANY! colony so long as they held a "ticket of leave," which gave them a species of liberty within a certain designated police district, but this "ticket I leave" is a thing which may at any time be taken away by the convict authorities or resigned by the prisoners. Now, while Mr. Smyth was in Van Dieman's Land, and before any movement whatever was made by any of the prisoners, the local government, by means of some of their enves-di detectives, had learned his real views, and M Smyth was actually arrested, held in custody for three days and most ignominously abused, under a warraut directed against John Mitchel. Mr. Smyth, in short, was taken for Mr. Mitchel, under the false and insolent assumption that Mr. Mitchel was absconding, whilst he was all the time living quietly at his cottage in Bothwell, and was under parole of honor not to abscond. This was a gross outrage on Mr. Smyth, and an outrage hardly less gross on Mr. Mitchel. He now, at length, resolved to avail himself of Mr. Smith's offers of assistance, and leave the island, not candestinely, but openly. Accordingly he wrote and despatched the following note to the Lieut. Governor, Sir Wm. Denison :

BOTHWELL, June 9, 1853. Sir: I hereby resign the "comparative liber-ty" called "ticket of leave," and revoke my parole of honor.
