The air to be warmed is taken directly from the outside of the building in all cases, thus insuring a supply of pure, wholesome air for breathing, and the other insportant functions required by the human system—the oxygen is not affected, nor the organic matter in the air carboulard by coming in contact with an over-heated surface, as with other furnaces, and headaches and other disagreemble sonsations are provented by this means—and in consequence of the warm air not making too large demands upon the lungs and evaporating surface of the skin, to supply the moistne which it has lost in parsing over a red hot surface. In proof of this, attention is called to the certificates of Professor Sillman, of Yale College, New Haven, and to those of other scientific persons who have canmined this subject. If public and universal appears its any test of merit, the proprietors of this valuable Furnace can appeal to the written testimony of thousands, to the prevs, and to public estibitions in all parts of the world, it having received the Price Medal at the World's Fair, and the highest Promiums at Fairs in New England, New York, and a Cilver Medal at the State Agricultural Fair in Pennsylvania.

Keyser's Pectoral, a friend observes, is the next thing to health itself. We may here observe, as we mention no names, that this friend was out on election night, and any jours to hear the news from Maine, turried long on the corners. The news came, but not until he had absorbed sufficient damp to give him the chills. Another friend invited him to take a giass of Scotch ale, which was put up in very black bottles. Our friends 'thirst was hugo and was only quenched after a number of empty bottles stood before him; a cold in the head was the consequence, which consequence was cured in six hours by using Keysor's Pectoral.
