TWO KINDS OF COURAGE. BY SYLVANUS CODS, JE. away with those finer and warmer traits of char-Among the crew of the Ponto, on her present voyage, was a young man named Caleb Baker. He had shipped only three days before the ship sailed. He was a slender framed man, with a fair prepossessing countenance, light blue eyes, and light brown hair. Though light in his build, he was yet well stocked with muscle, and his motions were quick and energetic. His appear-ance was calculated to predispose beholders in One day, shortly after the ship had left port, own in one of the gangways, one of the men, a came along and gave the clothes bag of Bakera kick out of his way, thereby scattering a num-ber of things about the deck. moved to gather up his things. "Very well,—have it your own way," calmly returned Baker, and he drew his bag closer in "And don't you be impudent, neither," provokingly added Bunkton. Look ye, Bunkton, if you've any business of your own you'd better mind it."
"Eb, lubber? Pil show ye my business. Take As Bunkton spoke, he struck the young man upon the face. The crew had most of them gathered about the place, and arrangements were quickly made for a fight. "Just come forward,—come forward, and I'll show ye my business."
"Don't stand that, Baker," cried a half a doz The young man's eyes had flashed as he received the blow, and there was a quick quiver-ing of the muscles in his hands, but he made no "Ain't you going to take it up ?" asked Bankton. "No. I want nothing to do with you," return-"Then you are a coward!" uttered Bunkton, with a contemptuous tone and look.

Young Baker calmly replied to the taunt, and Bunkton became still more savage. Those who know anything about ocean life, will understand the sentiments of the rough crew upon such atters as the present. They could comprehend out one kind of courage, and the moment that Baker refused to fight, they set him down as an arrant coward. At first they had been prepos-sessed in his favor, for Bunkton was a quarrel-some fellow, and they hoped Caleb would flog was attracted to the spot.

The matter was explained to him.

"Didn't resent it?" uttered the captain, looking with mingled surprise and contempt upon Caleb. "Why didn't you knock him down Ba-Separation and the depoted of the control of the co

He stoggered aft to the binnacle, and there he sank stoggered aft to the binnacle, and there he sank fainting and bruised, upon the deck; but he was quickly conveyed to the cabin, and his wants were all met. Caleb's bruises were none of them bad, and in a few days he was again at his duty. The men eyed him anxiously, and they seemed un-easy as they met his smiles. The captain, too, changed color, when he met the kind, noble look of the young man, but he soon overcame the false pride that actuated him, and stepping to the noble fellow's side, he took him by the hand: "Caleb." said he: "if I have done wrong, I

"Caleb," said he, "if I have done wrong, I freely ask you to forgive me. I have called you a coward, but I did not know you."
