At last the speckled hen has gono-That hen of hens the best; The died without a sigh or groan, While in her downy nest.

Thro' summer's heat and winter's snow For ten long years the lay, At noon and eve, old Grimes an egg, But none the Sabbath day.

She had a nest behind the door, All nessly lined with hay: Her back was brown and sprinkled o'er With spots "inclined to grey."

Though fourieen years of age almost, She still looked young and hale-And like Job's turkey she could boast One feather in her tail. The neighbors' fowls did all agree he was a good old sor She sometimes roosted in a tree, And sometimes on a pole.

Whene'er the rain came pelting down, And thunder dreadful roar, She hid herself in Grimes' hat, Until the storm was o'er.

She lived a plain and honest life-She flew at neighbor Sampson's wife, And scratched out both her eyes.

She newbr deigned the barn yard beau, His face to look upon, And loved but one, whose long shrill crow Was beaul at early dawn.

An aged cock, who off had told His descent, with a sigh, From one that crow'd when he of old His master did deny.

When poor old speckle closed her cys, He jumped the funce and cried-

He bid the poultry all good byc, And then laid down and died.

Kind reader now well drop a tear To Grimes' speckled hen; It is too true, we ne'er shall look Upon her like again.
