Jayne's Expectorant. Jayne's Expectorant. CONSUMPTION.-Thisterm isfrequently inappropriately applied to other affections of the lungs and Bronchia. So far as the treatment is concerned, this is of vory little concequence, as the remedies are the same. The EXPEC-TURANT should be given as often as may be necessary to relieve the cough, and produce a free and easy expectors-tion, and also to remove the tighiness, or pain, or oppres-sion about the throat or chest. The bowels should be regu-inted by the use of the SANATUR PILLS whenever neces-fary. If there be much debility, with night sweats, from one to two tea spoonfuls of TONIC VERMITFUGE should be mixed in two or three spoonful of cold water, and sweats-or if they disappear, then give the ALTERIATVE three times a day, according to the directions, instead of the VERMITFUGE.
