breaths that so inexplicably meet the traveler in a summer night, gave evidence of a coming storm. The bite of the mosquitos that choked the very air in clouds were distressing beyond all endurance, and as the half-naked body of their prisoner hung backward in its faintness, the stripes of bloody skin, torn loose by their whip lashes, were quite hidden by their black, eager forms. What should they do? The suggestion of Dr. Venser cannot be entertained for a moment; the reader may readily guess what it was. Finally, it was decided that Damon should remain hanging there until morning, and the party would then return.

To remain there among the mosquitos! Far more kind to have adopted the shorter plan of the Doctor's and let the black mould of the cane brake cover his dead. But thunder clouds were banking up on every side, and the regulators hurried to the river to get across in time, barely in time, to escape the storm.

Amidst the crushing of the trees and the howling of the blasts, the unpitied gambler returned to his senses. It had been the sleep of death, but for those very stings that aroused the life within him to resist their horrid attacks. The dash of cold rain upon his exposed wounds was grateful to the fever that scorched his very vitals, and still better, it drove away the musquitos. The lynchers were gone, that was sufficient evidence, he had not been whipped to death, as they threatened; and now, could he but clear away these cords, vengeance was within his reach. O, how that hope strengthened his sinews to strain, and hardened his very teeth to gnaw at the very strong fibres that bound him. What a horrid laugh issued from his lungs, as the first band gave way. With what an exulting bound he sprang from the holly tree, whose virgin bark was now first stained by human blood, and with his right hand extended towards the Thunderer's throne, vowed death to the four, or death to himself!

But little he heeded now to the torn skin or gashed flesh upon his back, he dashed the canes aside, and at a run reached the bank. A half mile up stream brought him to a farm-house and wood-yard, where a small skiff, without oars, was fastened to the bank by a chain and lock. Tearing off the fastenings, regardless of oars, he pushed off, and by the aid of a basin that lay in the bottom of the skiff, propelled the boat across, but at a point some miles below the town.

By noon the next day he was lying, all unknown to any one except his wife, at his own house in a state of high delirium. This continued for more than a month, during which time the strong minded woman hung over his bed by day and night, fed upon hopes of delicious revenge, nor suffered a living soul to know that her husband was there. A strong constitution carried the gambler through, and he was pronounced by his faithful nurse to be out of danger.

Then the twain sat for long hours, for hours that ran far into the night or morning, and devised their projects of revenge. There was no difference of sentiment between them as to the amount of the provocation, none as to the extent to which their vengeance should go. Death, death was the horrid sum total; but the details, these required consideration, and who of the doomed four should lead the way in the procession of ghosts? And should they all die in the same manner? And in what manner should death be meted out to them? And when should the tower of Silsom fall?

So carefully had the heroine preserved the secret of her husband's return, that her nearest neighbors did not suspect it. The four lynchers discovered that Damon had freed himself, but finding no evidence that he had ever made his escape from the cane-brake, they agreed that he must have died there, so they considered the guilty mystery of his disappearance in their breasts.

Mrs. Damon caused an advertisement to be inserted in the town journal, offering a large reward for the discovery of her husband's body, supposed to have been drowned about the night of July—. This step added to their assurance, and in a few weeks they began to breathe freely again.

But the avenger was in their path. A State's warrant was sworn out against the four for assault and battery on the person of Eugene Damon. Confronted with the accuser in the magistrate's court, they were identified by his plain, direct testimony, as well as by various circumstantial evidences, and put under the heaviest bail bonds to appear before the next Circuit Court.

But the bar before which they were to stand, and the judge with whom they were to be confronted were of a far higher character than those. For, as they sat in the presence of their friends, two of them having their wives and children present, as they sat depressed in mind by the turn the affair was taking, Damon walked deliberately up to them, drew two double barreled pistols from his pockets, and with right and left hands, for he was ambidexterous, shot the four through the heart before a gesture or even a word could be interposed!

Vengeance was never more sudden or complete. The four young men, all in the prime of life, the crowd of horror-stricken friends, the fury of the citizens, the dismay of the officers, must be conceived rather that described. Damon was borne to jail, placed in due time upon trial, and acquitted on the score of justification!

LAUGHING.—Commend us to a good, hearty laugher—one that explodes the vowels without "let or hindrance"—that rings the changes on the a, e, i, o, u, and y, and wakes the echoes if there be any asleep.

This may not be exactly according to D'Orsay; it may be decidedly vulgar; is so, it'll not be the first time that diamonds have been found in the dust.

We just heard one of those good wholesome laughs, and a hod-carrier was the author of it. Ten to one, he is an honest, generous fellow, who carries, besides his heart about him, week days and Sundays. It was no hollow, ghostly laugh, but a round, full, human explosion, with a body and soul to it; that one cannot help liking; whether he will or not.

A man may "smile and smile, and be a villain," not so with your hearty laugher. But a simper, that diffuses a sickly moonlight over the face, and a chuckle that lodges in the throat and reddens the face, and shuts the eyes, are our abomination. We can abide a regular Leather Stocking laugh, that shakes the frame like an ague, and is only indulged in upon special occasions. It is like a dinner for one—not social to be sure, but then comfortable and endurable. It is contagious withal and altogether a luxury of a laugh, if one only knows how to enjoy it.

But the most musical of all things is the free, ringing laughter of childhood. No frost in it, no guile in it, it should be classed with the song of birds and the murmer of brooks. It "speaks the vacant mind"—not the thoughtless, but the care-free mind, before the heavy strings of this harp of life, and wound over and over, for the player, sadder notes of the time.

STRANGE IDEA.—Read and reflect upon the following article. What a stand still of the world there would be if the suggestion was carried out! Not a newspaper printed in the United States for two months. At the command of JOSHUA, the sun stood still, but were newspapers to cease it would seemingly be as great a stoppage:

General Suspension of Newspapers.—There has been considerable said, in different quarters and by different writers, as to what would be the effect upon the reading public of the United States, if all the newspapers were to suspend their operations for one or two months. We should like to see the experiment tried. We have no doubt that it would be the means to bring to the press a much better support than it has received. Men, who now rely on their neighbors who take the paper, for all the information they get, would become more interested, and support some paper or other; for the disappointment to those who do not take the paper would be as great as those who do.

If we propose that the newspaper publishers of the United States shall agree upon a time to suspend operations for two months, during which time no papers or extras containing news shall be issued from any office; and that the printers of each State shall appoint a day, during such time, upon which they will meet at their respective Capitals and have a grand jubilee. What say all hands to the proposition?—St. Louis Press.

MILLS' STATUE OF WASHINGTON.—The artist has chosen for the exercise of his skill, the following incident in our revolutionary history:—

It will be remembered by the readers of history, that, after a midnight march, the American army approached Princeton, and there engaged the British in one of the hottest conflicts of the revolution. At first the latter, with fixed bayonets, compelled the former to retreat, with considerable loss. Washington, with the main body of the army, then came on, and renewed the attack with great spirit, which finally resulted in victory to the American forces. The horse of Washington had rushed impetuously to near the lines of the British posts, and there halted, exposing its illustrious rider to the leaden hail of the enemy.

The Washington Sentinel says the statue will be of immense proportions, the head of the horse to be eight feet in length, or four times larger than in the natural subject, and the nose of Washington fifteen inches in length. These points will afford some idea of the contemplated size of the statue. The design now is to elevate it to a height of seventy feet, that it may be seen miles distant from every direction.

THE WEEKLY POST,

Now for sale at the counter contains a great variety of interesting reading matter. It has full particulars of the war news up to the hour of publication, and the very latest foreign information on general subjects that has been received. Our Market Reports, foreign and domestic, are full and may be relied upon as correct. In this department of our paper, we take great pains to have the report as accurate as possible, and we are gratified to hear that it gives great satisfaction to our country patrons. Our Editorial, Local and miscellaneous columns are filled with articles of much interest to every reader.

HOW FLOUR IS MADE, AND WHERE.

We visited the Pearl Mill, in Allegheny city, a few days ago, and were astonished to witness the complicated machinery, the admirable arrangements, and perfect order in which business is done, and flour made, in that vast establishment. Few of our citizens probably have any idea of the amount of capital invested, and business done, by the enterprising proprietors of that concern. Wheat has been selling throughout Ohio for some time past, for about one dollar and fifty cents per bushel. Yet the proprietors of the Pearl Mill have kept buying until they have now on hands about one hundred and fifty thousand bushels of wheat. Some 45,000 bushels are stored in and about the mill. The balance is arriving from all western points where it has been purchased. The amount of capital invested by this firm is very large. The price of the above quantity wheat, the value of the large stock of flour waiting for shipment eastward, and the cost of the mill, and all its complicated and perfect machinery, must require a capital of a third of a million dollars.

It is said that no flouring mill in the United States excels this in its arrangements and machinery, or its means of turning out an excellent quality of flour; and we are informed that not one barrel of its flour has yet failed to pass inspection. It has established a good reputation in the eastern cities, and its success is now fully assured.

This mill has ten run of stones, and, when fully employed day and night, it can turn off about seven hundred and sixty barrels of flour every twenty-four hours. The location of the mill is very favorable for doing business on the most economical principles. The Ohio and Pennsylvania railroad can deliver wheat from the west to-day, at one window of the mill, which tomorrow will be dropped into canal boats in the form of flour, from another window, and depart for the east. At least, such will be the case when the canal is opened. This saves much expense, and gives the company many advantages. The processes through which this wheat passes while being converted into flour, is altogether too complicated for description here. The mill is five floors high; and the wheat, we are told, passes three times from the lower to the upper floor while going through the various processes of garnering, cleansing, grinding, bolting, and packing into barrels. It is all done by machinery, too. It would be an amusing occupation to trace the course of a bushel of wheat on its winding way through that mill; going up and down, and to the right and left, again and again, till it at length is in the flour barrel, and on its way to some distant, perhaps foreign market.

The smut machine used in this mill is said to be the best invention for cleaning wheat used in this country. It was invented by Jacob Benner of this city, and took the premium at the recent State fair. This process of cleaning the wheat is all important to the quality and beauty of the flour.

This mill would grind 3,200 bushels of wheat in 24 hours, using 400 bushels of coal in the time. It thus takes but one-eighth of a bushel of coal to supply power to grind a bushel of wheat; or a little over half a bushel of coal to make a barrel of flour.

We noticed four brands of flour made at the mill. 1st, "Double" extra, made of white wheat. This is the best quality. 2d, a kind branded "Baker's Choice," of Mediterranean wheat. 3d, "Extra family" flour of mixed wheat. 4th, "Superfine."

We cannot close without noticing the excellent arrangements in the Pearl mill to avoid danger from fire. The whole mill is lighted with gas. On each of the several floors is provided 60 or 70 feet of hose, by which water can be carried to any part of that floor from an upright tube always filled. Then a gas tube always filled when the mill is in operation, extends up through all the rooms, and if the water from the hose failed to extinguish the flames, the whole mill could be filled and enveloped with steam. For safety, convenience, economy and excellence of machinery, this mill is probably not excelled by any in the country; and the character of its flour is now well and favorably established.

On the whole, we were will pleased with our visit to this great establishment, and with the courtesy of Mr. Noble, who "put us through" it with many explanations. Mr. B. Angel, of Pittsburgh, was the architect of this mill; and it is said that he has combined in it everything that would render it unsurpassed for its purpose.

LEGISLATIVE.

We learn by telegraphic despatch received this morning, from Harrisburg, that the amendment proposed by Mr. Ellis, to the Prohibitory Liquor Law, reported from the committee on Vice and Immorality by Mr. Cook, was lost in the House by a vote of 22 yeas, to 67 nays. The amendment of Mr. Ellis proposed to submit the question to the people whether it was advisable to enact a prohibitory law, and then pass an act by the Legislature. Mr. Cook's bill enacts a prohibitory liquor law, to go into effect in 1855, and provides for the submission of the question of its repeal to the people, at the next State election. This bill will probably pass the House.

SENATOR ELI K. PRICE.—This gentleman, one of the Senators from Philadelphia, has been severely censured by the temperance men of that city, for his opposition to the section of the prohibitory bill empowering officers to search out liquor in stores and private houses. A meeting was held and he was severely reprimanded for his course. A meeting has since been called to sustain Mr. Price in his course in the Senate. The North American says this "step has been resolved upon, not because there is the slightest occasion for it in reference to public sentiment here, for Mr. Price was never more highly esteemed in Philadelphia than he is this moment; but in order that Mr. Price's slanderers might meet with a public rebuke.

PUTNAM'S MAGAZINE.—The March number of this magazine can be had at Gildenfenney & Co's and Miner & Co's Literary Depots. We have heretofore noticed it as a very interesting number.

ENGLAND, FRANCE AND AMERICA.

It is stated that our government has sent instructions to Mr. Buchanan, at London, to inquire the meaning of Lord Clarendon's remarks in the British Parliament, when he stated that there were questions to be settled on the American continent; and that the alliance between England and France was for the purpose of settling these questions, as well as the Eastern question. We hope this report is true, and that an explanation will be demanded, and obtained. Public men at Washington regard this language of the English minister as very significant; and that it contains a warning to this country that cannot be disregarded. For a long time England and France have sought to check the expansive tendency, and the rapid growth of this country. Our "manifest destiny" is alarming to them; and they seem now to have combined to control that destiny; and to set bounds to our growth and power. It is well known that England and France strove to prevent the annexation of Texas. In that they were baffled. Then came the acquisition of New Mexico and California, much against the will of the European "Regulators." Then followed events that indicated the speedy acquisition of Cuba, if strong measures were not taken to prevent it. A tripartite was proposed, which our government was called upon to sign, forever prohibiting the acquisition of Cuba. Our government promptly rejected it; and since then coercive measures have been more than once indicated as the intention of England and France.

This speech of Lord Clarendon seems to be the first open announcement of a determination to "regulate" the affairs of this continent. To secure Cuba to Spain for all time, and provide for its Africanization; to build up a rival power of Spanish origin; to keep our republic in check; and to secure Central America for European colonization. Such are the measures which this alliance of regulators seems resolved to accomplish. All those measures our government is bound to prevent at any cost, and at all hazards.

We are glad to learn that our public men at Washington have awakened to the importance of the subject; and are giving it serious attention. We hope it will result in speedy provision for the increase of the navy; and for every preparation to meet the threatened crisis. Let explanations be demanded; but, at the same time, let preparation be promptly made for a final struggle with the monarchies of Europe. That such a struggle must come sooner or later, no one can doubt; and should the efforts to settle the Eastern question result in peace in Europe, that struggle between republicanism and crowned heads would not be long delayed.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.

At the meeting to elect officers of this association on Thursday evening, it was discovered that twenty-one Directors, and a Secretary and Treasurer were required to be elected by the old charter. The notice that had been given was therefore wrong, and the meeting adjourned to Monday evening next, when the election will take place.

We are glad to see the spirit with which this association is pushing on its organization. It can become an institution of great value and benefit to the interests of Pittsburgh. We hope party considerations will have nothing to do with the election of officers.

THE PENNY HOTEL.—A change has taken place in the proprietorship of this Hotel. It is now under the charge of McMASTER & MARKLE, gentlemen who have the talent and industry to make it one of the most popular houses in our city.

Young Men's Christian Association.

Ought there not to be a "Young Men's Christian Association in Pittsburgh? In Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Charleston, Cincinnati, St. Louis and in almost all our principal cities, such exist and are instruments of great good. It is probable, some in our midst are "posted up" in reference to these Associations, but perhaps many do not know much about them, and hence cannot give an intelligent answer to the question, with which this article begins: therefore, I will briefly state their character and objects.

They are composed of Christians, of various denominations, between the ages, usually, of eighteen and thirty—comprising, perhaps, the most interesting class of community,) and such older gentlemen as may be elected by these young men. The first class are termed "regular" or active members, while the latter are "honorary." Monthly or quarterly, and annual meetings are held for Christian and social intercourse—reading of communications by members previously elected for the purpose—transaction of business, &c.

The chief objects of such Associations can be best understood by reading the following article from the "Constitution" of one in reference to the duties of members.

"The members of the Association shall seek out young men taking up their residence in the city, and endeavor to bring them under moral and religious influences, by aiding them in the selection of suitable boarding places, &c.; by introducing them to the members and privileges of the Association; by securing their attendance at some place of worship on the Sabbath; and in all ways labor for the spiritual, mental, and social improvement of young men."

During the winter, or lecture season, courses of lectures, by persons of standing ability and reputation, (not mere notoriety), such as Lucy Stone and Antoinette Brown, are given under the auspices of the Association, the nature of the subjects of which may be seen from the following, taken from the programme of a course now being delivered before the "St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association"—"Despotism, spiritual and political, in the nineteenth century;" "Mammonism;" "Modern Infidelity—its philanthropic pretensions," &c.

Such, in general, are the "Y. M. C. Associations," as existing and operating in other cities, and I now again ask, "should we not have one here?"

Surely there are young men enough in Pittsburgh and Allegheny of the proper character to go into such an Association—and surely such an Association would accomplish good in our midst. If allowed the space I could, I believe, present facts and arguments sufficient to induce proper action in this matter, but I will wait until these are called for. I am a young man who has been in your midst but a few months, but in that time I have often thought such an Association desirable, and am ready at any time to go into the work of establishing one, if such, with all my little ability. What say the young christian men of Pittsburgh and Allegheny? And what say the fathers and friends of young men?

Great Cure by Dr. Keyser's Pectoral SYRUP.—I live in Peebles township, Allegheny county, I had a coughing and spitting, which commenced about the 4th of February last, and continued for eight whole months. I employed the best physicians in the country, and my cough continued unabated, until early in October. At that time I was advised to try your PECTORAL COUGH SYRUP, which I did; and after I had taken one bottle, I was entirely free from coughing and spitting. I had despaired of ever getting well, and I think it should be known that this valuable remedy will do for others what it has done in my case. JOHN C. LITTLE, Peebles tp.

"Gently thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy; rich, not gaudy—
For the apparel oft proclaims the man."

☞ Every well dressed man knows how difficult it is to find a Tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well cut, gentlemanly fitting garment. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new article of dress, and however costly, never become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity, R. GRIBBLE has practically studied both form and fashion, always adapting the garment, weather, coat, vest, or pantaloons, to the exigencies of its wearer—thoroughly attaining that elegance of fit which the spirit of the age dictates.

☞ This is the Remedy!—MOSSE'S INVIGORATING ELIXIR OR CORDIAL.—If there be a "special providence in the fall of a sparrow," so is there also in the plucking of an herb. What now would be the condition of thousands, if Dr. Morse, in his oriental wanderings, had not discovered this plant which gives to his Invigorating Elixir or Cordial its extraordinary potency in functional diseases? He found the production growing and in use among a race remarkable for longevity and for exemption from the harrassing diseases of civilized life. He made many inquiries as to the effect produced by this herb, and the replies convinced him that it possessed restorative and vitalizing properties heretofore unheard of except in fable. Having concentrated the juices of the plant, and combined it with other vegetable extracts, he commenced experimenting with the compound upon himself and others. Finally he presented to the world the Invigorating Elixir; and what is all his fame as a philosopher and traveler, compared with that which he will derive from the introduction of this rejuvenating preparation? Age and decrepitude feel new life, stirring within them, under the influence of this unrivalled exhilerant. The trembling, shaking, despairing, strengthless victim of nervous disease is enabled to throw off the incubus that was pressing him to the earth; the dyspeptic patient feels his appetite return, and the power of digestion with it; and woman, suffering under the tortures of hysteria, or any of the debilitating complaints or disabilities which belong to her sexuality, experiences in every fibre of her shattered system the restorative effects of this peerless remedy.

The Cordial is put up, highly concentrated; in pint bottles. Price three dollars per bottle, two for five dollars, six for twelve dollars.

☞ What, or Which is the Best Vermifuge or Worm Destroyer?—Is a question daily and hourly asked by parents, anxious for the health of their children. All who are at all acquainted with the article, will immediately answer, Dr. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED VERMIFUGE. It has never been known to fail, and is one of the safest remedies that can be used. A friend of ours lately handed us the following statement in reference to this Vermifuge:

NEW YORK, August 25, 1852.

GENTLEMEN—A young lady of my acquaintance had been for a long time very much troubled with worms. I advised her to try Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge. She accordingly purchased and took one vial, which caused them to discharge an unusually large quantity of worms. She was immediately relieved of all the dreadful symptoms accompanying this disease, and rapidly recovered her usual health. The young lady does not wish her name mentioned; her residence, however, is 330 Fifth street, and she refers to Mrs. Hardie, No. 3 Manhattan place.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, and take none else.

Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, also his Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable Drug Stores in the United States and Canada. Also for sale by the sole proprietors,
