Representatives on Wednesday. Mr. Lyon spoke in favor of the bill, and declared his intention to propose an amendment, making the number twelve instead of six. He said that England now has 460 war vessels afloat, and France 822 ; while the United States has but 72. The present state of the world, he argued, was such as to require a much larger navy to protect our rights and commerce, and keep us clear of the conflicts in which Europe and Asia were involved. His amendment will meet with favor, and will probably pass. No better use could be made of the surplus revenue. The Report of the Revenue Commission
