THE FOREIGN NEWS.

The news by the Arabia, the last arrival, is interesting; and it indicates the near approach of serious battles, both by land and sea: and there is as yet no evidence that the Emperor of Russia intends to adopt a merely defensive attitude, notwithstanding the powerful combination against him. The passage of the Danube by his troops, the cruising of his fleets in the Black Sea, and the earnest preparations for active hostilities in the Baltic, all look like a bold resolve to meet his powerful enemies in open conflict. He has struck the first blow in the war with England. Two English vessels were fired upon by his batteries, and one of them sunk. The war is actually begun. The three weeks are nearly passed, and Admiral Napier is still a great distance from St. Petersburgh. His fleet will never reach that city, probably. It is said that Russia has now over a million of men under arms; and in cannon and munitions of war the empire is abundantly supplied. That the war will be "sharp" and bloody cannot be doubted; but that it will be short is not likely. It is probably the commencement of a long war, destined to result in great changes in the condition of Europe and Asia. There are strong indications that Prussia will yet be found on the side of Russia; and the good will of the government of Austria towards the Western Powers is by no means assured. The result of one campaign will, probably, make quite a difference in the state and strength of the parties involved in the contest.

CHEAP POSTAGE.—Our neighbor of the Journal repeats our remarks, with a few alterations, in relation to the propositions before Congress to increase the rates of postage on letters and newspapers; and then it declares the proposition a democratic measure. We consider it no party question at all. It is a question in which the whole people are concerned; and it will be settled right, if editors and politicians would not seek to make political capital out of it by trying to monopolize it as a party question. The Post was the first paper in this city to call attention to the report of Mr. Olds, in the House of Representatives, which recommends an increase of postage: and we denounced the measure as unnecessary and unjust. Other democratic papers have done the same, and whig papers also. How then will the editor of the Journal justify himself in pronouncing it a party measure. So far as we can learn from the press, without distinction of party, the measure proposed is generally disliked. If the voice of the people is heard and obeyed, no increase of postage will be adopted. We agree with the Journal that the government ought to be able to carry the mails as cheap as private companies and individuals can carry freight. If that cannot be done, then let the difference in cost come out of the public treasury. But the surest way to defeat the wish of the people in this matter is to try to make a party question of it.

AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP.—A London correspondent of the Boston Post has the following in relation to a case that has created unusual interest. The decision of the Lord Chancellor is most ridiculous, and if the principle is backed by government, will afford food for diplomacy. According to Lord Chancellor, we are all British subjects who can claim British ancestry; even the descendants of those who came over in the Mayflower are not American citizens, but subjects of her Majesty! We give the extract from the letter:

> There have been two decisions in the English courts the past week which will not be without interest to your readers. One was made by the lord chancellor at his chambers yesterday, in reference to a proceeding in the case of the late Judge Jay, of New York, a girl of ten years old, who was clandestinely brought to this country some months ago from her home in Paris by her mother, who was an Englishman, naturalized in the United States.
> The father and mother are both dead, leaving property to the child, which came by the mother, to the amount of some 500,000*l*. Upon the decease of the latter, the executors of New York appointed Miss Jay her guardian, but the sister of the father, with whom the child was then staying, having a partiality for her own country, surreptitiously got possession of with the girl and brought her here. Miss Jay followed, and has carried the matter with laudable perseverance from court to court until the verdict of yesterday. Said the chancellor: This decision deserves to be republished from the Times of the first day in January, 1854, as the best illustration in existence of what you once styled "an exaggerance exactly British." Though the father had long resided in the United States—though he was a naturalized citizen—though he had absolved himself by oath from all allegiance to Great Britain,—the lord chancellor asserts that he was a British subject. Though the child was born of a naturalized American father and of a native American mother, in the United States—though the property is the inheritance of her from the mother, and is in the United States—yet the lord chancellor claims her as a British subject.—Refuse to allow her to return to the United States with Miss Jay, her aunt; —and directs Miss Jay to pay the interest of the child's property, as it shall accrue, into court here, to pay the expenses of the proceedings and for the child's benefit. So much for the rights of American citizenship!

TRIAL OF COL. COLLIER.—The action brought by the United States to recover from Mr. James Collier a balance of account of $180,000, alleged to be due from him, as Collector of the Port of San Francisco, was commenced at New York, in the United States Circuit Court, on Monday morning, before Judge Betts.

The evidence for the Government submitted, consists merely of the treasury account, showing the alleged balance. Ex-Senator Dickinson, and Mr. John A. Collier, are counsel for the defendant. The case will probably occupy three days.

Mr. O'Conor, on the part of the government, entered into a long argument, in the course of which he said: "It would be found that on account of some mere technical violation of law Mr. Collier had seized upon some property, valued at over $90,000, and instead of waiting for condemnation by some competent judicial authority, had, by the consent of some really unauthorized party, sold the property involved, sent one-half to Washington, and, pocketed the other half, between forty and fifty thousand dollars."

THE HOGS.—We understand that the Councils have provided a lot of ground for the use of the Mayor in imprisoning the hogs. We hope now the hog nuisance will be speedily abated. It would be one great and decided improvement in the city.

Some of the streets, too, have been cleaned very handsomely. In fact, the city just now presents evidences of decided improvement, both in cleanliness, and in the taste displayed in store fronts and architecture.

LABORERS WANTED.—By reference to our advertisement in another column, it will be seen that a large number of laborers are needed on the Sunbury and Erie road. The contractors are well known among railroad men, and the wages offered are good.

ONE OF ENGLAND'S WARRIORS.

A letter from a Midshipman in the English fleet, now in the Baltic, to his father and mother at home, presents a strange mingling of a boy's love for home and friends, and a hero's thirst for blood and carnage. The letter, which we publish below, was written by a boy only thirteen years old, while the fleet lay at anchor in Wingo Sound.

The boy seems to entertain no thought of danger, but is only anxious to have a sharp sword and a pistol; and then a chance to dash into battle and carnage, and win prize money and glory.

What fate awaits the young hero no one can tell. But with all his warm home affections, and all the ambitious yearnings of his heart about him, a sudden and violent death may overtake him in his first battle.

The demoralizing influence of war can have no better illustration than this case presents. The boy writes to his mother like a child, and then rejoices at the prospect of being soon engaged in slaying men. He says he is in the first division of the boarders, and is delighted with the chance of being among among the first on board the enemy's ship, when the battle comes to close quarters. The thought of prize money, too, whets his appetite as he sharpens his sword.

Strange feelings, those, for a boy of thirteen. He wants to slay men for money and glory. Yet such are all military and naval heroes; and such the fierce demon spirit engendered by war. But here is the letter:

> "WINGO SOUND, GOTTENBURGH, H. M. S. ——,
> March 29, 1854.
> Dear Mamma and Papa: I am going to send you a few lines about our own division of the Baltic fleet. You, of course, have heard of our parading at Elsinore, where the Queen came down upon us, and then we made the Nore, Sheerness, and after that came on to the Sound at Wingo. A great many people came down from Gottenburgh to see us, and call us the deliverers of our country, and such things, and make presents and other things to us. I hope, if all goes well, to get a month's leave when I come back to England, after the war. I have got one of the most dangerous and best posts for myself for chances of taking prizes to the ship, as I am captain's aid-de-camp, and I shall go with him in his gig. I am trying to get a pistol, as everybody else has one, and mean to get one, too, if possible. We are allowed them. I can get one easily, as I have lots of tin, supplied by kind aunts. I mean, if possible, to get some prize money. I am in the first division of boarders, and am nearly sure, if any work is going on, to be in the latter. I am happy to say that I have got a very good sword indeed, and am very happy. I should like to see you before we go to the forts—very much indeed, but impossible, as I must hurry. Write to me soon, as once more I must say how I long to hear from home. Love to all, and a fond farewell. I am very much obliged to Harry and Henny, tell them, for their kind letters to me during the time I was at Portsmouth, though not able to go on shore. When the mess practice firing, we do also. It is so odd. We have some very fine ships' firings, so if I do not mind it much. The ship packed all afternoon, so I must hurry. Good bye, dear mamma and papa, and brothers and sisters. I remain, dear all of you, H. ——

"Now is child, and all brothers and sisters, and Charley, [a pet fox,] and Rodney, and the dogs, and the short-tailed pony!"

☞ A fatality seems to attend the movements of the troops which were first shipped on the ill-fated San Francisco. By a despatch from Norfolk we learn that the steamship Falcon put into that port on Monday, disabled. She left New York on the 18th inst., with Companies D, G, I and K, of the 33 Regiment U. S. Artillery, numbering 255 men, and commanded by Lieut. Col. Loeser. Most of the troops were those rescued from the steamer San Francisco, and were on their way to California by the Isthmus route. The troops and all the passengers have been safely landed. The troops are accommodated at Fortress Monroe, until provision can be made for sending them on to their destination. The injury to the Falcon is only in her machinery.

Nobilities in Florence.

The intelligent correspondent of the Newark Advertiser gives the following personal intelligence, of general interest:

FLORENCE, March 22, 1854.

Among the English residents, living at the villa Mrs. Somerville, the Brownings, Charles Lever, Mr. Kirkup, the antiquarian; Mr. Tennyson, brother of the poet-laureate, and who has himself a volume of poems now in press; and Mrs. Trollope, who made her début in authorship through the columns of the Boston Mail. Since then her prolific brain has produced eighty-nine volumes of so-so tales—proving that "weeds grow"—not unproductively, however, for her, since she has reaped therefrom an abundant pecuniary harvest, and now occupies a beautiful villa built by herself and son, who is also a successful story-teller. Mrs. Trollope has one of the largest and choicest of the private libraries in the city. The library room is an expansive Gothic hall, the furniture being all after the antique, and decorated with statuary and paintings. In this hall she holds her Saturday evening receptions, and strange to say, she affects Americans so much as to hunt them up, and loads them with hospitalities. She is an affable, pleasant old lady of about seventy, and was probably more disgusted with her pecuniary misadventures in the United States than with the people she ridiculed in her spleen.

Mrs. Somerville is now about seventy-three years old—in an excellent state of preservation, and is altogether a remarkable woman. She studies early, devoting her time from noon to scientific study and writing, and at other times her hours are herself much with sketching from nature, painting in oil, and embroidery, thus showing that the pursuit of mathematics is not incompatible with a love for the fine arts. No living woman ever received more flattering compliments from her own government, and from those of all nations, than Mrs. Somerville; her bust stands in the British Academy by the side of Sir Isaac Newton's, and Baron Humboldt has called her "the greatest of women." She is perfectly simple and unpretentious in her manners, and never refers to her own labors, which, notwithstanding the extensive circulation of her works, have yielded her small pecuniary benefit. But she has a pension from the British crown, and lives here with her husband, a retired surgeon of the navy, and the two daughters, going much into society, being welcomed everywhere and admired for her quiet manners and agreeable conversation. Mr. Lever lives generously in a place; gives dinners sparkling with wit and wine; loves horses like a true Irish-Englishman; is devoted to his wife and his roy-cheeked daughters on either side of him, and is literally "a good fellow," his sparkling table-talk full of humor as his Irish tales.

Mr. Tennyson lives retired, though in easy and elegant circumstances, occupying a fine villa filled with choice books and paintings. The Brownings still occupy the Casa Guidi, an old palace; never go into society, but receive their friends quietly in the evening. Mrs. Browning is physically as frail as her mind and verse are strong; with much gentle unpretending manners, and such a pleasant expression of face, that no one, to look at her, would believe that such force and passion could come out of such an apparently delicate, unperturbed nature. Mr. Browning is alive with good nature and humor; full of practical knowledge, and as plain and smooth in talk as he is sincere and rough in his writings; in short, as in the case with Mrs. Browning, the very opposite of the book-Browning.

T. Buchanan Read, one of our American artists, now in Florence, has painted lately cabinet portraits of both, and they are truthful likenesses. They belong to a gentleman in Philadelphia, and will give all who see them there just notions of the originals. Mr. Read is now engaged upon several well-conceived compositions, which will do him credit.

Mr. Hart, the Kentucky sculptor, commissioned by the ladies of Virginia, to make a statue of Henry Clay, has recently produced some charming busts of young American ladies from only one to two sittings, with the aid of an ingenious measuring instrument of his own invention, for which he intends soon to take a patent, and which proves a rare mechanical genius. He cannot fail to win distinction. Indeed, American artists at Florence form a strong and respectable representative body, with Powers for its head.

The St. Louis, Captain Ingraham, is now at Constantinople. Mr. Marsh, the late minister resident, is now at Rome with his family.

☞ TWO WEEKS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.—New Orleans, April 23.—The steamer United States, from Aspinwall, has arrived here, bringing California dates to the 1st instant. She reports that the steamer Illinois left Aspinwall on the 17th inst., with $1,000,000 in gold and the mails for New York.

The intelligence by this arrival is but meagre. The markets were exceedingly depressed.

The British ship Challenge had been seized for a violation of the revenue laws.

Col. Watkins, of the Walker expedition, had been found guilty, but recommended to the mercy of the court.

A duel had taken place between M. F. Washington, one of the editors of the Times, and Mr. Washburn, of the Alta California. The latter was badly wounded.

The Japan squadron arrived at Loo Choo in January. All well.

The steamer Illinois connected with the steamer Oregon. She left Aspinwall with seven hundred and fifty passengers.

HARRISBURG CORRESPONDENCE.

HARRISBURG, April 25.

EDITOR POST:—Wars and rumors of wars about the halls of legislation this day. Mr. Strong, a Philadelphia member read in place a "bill to abolish the Board of Canal Commissioners, and to provide for the better regulation and management of public works." The bill contains twenty-two sections, and purposes to take effect from and after the first day of June next. It provides for the appointment of a Secretary of Public Works, by the Governor, who is to select a Civil Engineer and Superintendents for the management of the State improvements. Should the act pass, that will be a radical change in the disbursements of public moneys, to meet demands for the wages of labor. The cash system is to govern, and payments to be made monthly, on auditing of claims supported by affidavit. This measure results from a recent act of the Board, which will reduce the tariff of State tolls after the 3d proximo. The opinion very generally prevailed that the reduction of tolls was designed to prevent a sale of the main line, for the act authorising the disposal of the public works limited the rates of toll to be charged, after transfer of the same, to such rates as were prescribed under the schedule of tolls established by the Canal Board. The Commissioners have become alarmed, and they deny that such was their intention. It must, however, be admitted that the time chosen for the change of tolls, on the heels of the act recently passed for the sale of the public works, was premature, if not, improper for the purposes intended.

The House passed a bill for consolidating the following Railroad Companies, viz:

The Baltimore and Susquehanna; the York and Cumberland, and the Susquehanna and Sunbury.

The act of consolidation, it is said, will materially enhance the value of those several stocks, and enable the company to complete much unfinished work upon those roads. J. J. Houston, Esq., Superintendent of the Baltimore and Susquehanna road is the master spirit of this enterprise, if I may judge from his frank and zealous efforts to have the bill disposed of.

Many bills relating to local interests were read a third time and passed.

Last night the House was a scene of confusion and excitement. The general appropriation bill passed finally, and was sent to the Senate this morning. Before the final vote was taken, Mr. Cook of Westmoreland asked leave to state his reasons for voting against the bill in its present form. The Chair called him to order, and ordered him to resume his seat. This characteristic manliness, and in a firm tone, the member inquired whether the Chair was resolved to apply the gag law, on information proper for the people.

The Chair would hear no expression after the case and says had been demanded, but still Mr. Cook claimed the right of freedom in debate. At this announcement the Speaker ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to remove the member from the Hall; to which a polite invitation was also given by the member for executing the commands of the Speaker. The Sergeant-at-Arms is a prudent and sensible officer, who knew how to rule the storm. His services were not brought into requisition; for Mr. Cook yielded to a sense of propriety which reflects credit on him, though he was deprived of an opportunity to speak of the iniquitous appropriations to liquidate claims of doubtful character.

In Senate, an attempt was made to consolidate the interests of the Ashtabula and Cleveland road with he Sunbury and Erie Company for obtaining the ownership of the Lake Shore Railroad. The measure failed. FARMER.

News and Facts from all Quarters.

A movement is on foot at Lancaster, Pa., to erect a monument there to the memory of the late Gov. Shultz.

Gen. Torrico, commander of the Peruvian government army, in his late retreat from Arequipa, ordered 1200 horses to be killed to prevent their falling in the hands of the revolutionists.

By the fire in Charleston, S. C., last week, nine of the finest stores on Hayne street were destroyed, valued at not over $500,000. The insurance in different offices amounted to $427,000.

All sorts of West India fruits are unusually plenty in New York at present. Several cargoes of pine apples and bananas from Matanzas and Baracoa have arrived in the course of the past week. The former sell at $12@$12,45 per 100.

Mr. John G. Moore, formerly an associate editor of the New York Courier and Enquirer, called at the Bellefield Intelligencer office on Saturday and requested the editor to state that he is not dead, as was reported last week in many of the newspapers.

Some rascals have set afloat at Green Bay, Wisconsin, ten or fifteen thousand dollars in notes purporting to be upon the "Metropolitan Bank," Washington city. There is no such bank. Such frauds as this are among the evils of paper currency.

The Grand Duke Michael, brother of the present Emperor of Russia, is said to have predicted, says Blackwood's Magazine, the dismemberment of the Russian Empire soon after the death of the present Autocrat. Whatever may be the solution of that prince as the character of a prophet, it is evident that Russia is now approaching a most important crisis.

Lucy Stone lectured at Xenia, Ohio, on Monday evening, to a crowded audience. A correspondent of a Cincinnati paper who was present, says:—"We have traveled over nearly the whole of the United States, have been a spectator at many lectures, but never have we seen such profound stillness, such entire good order as was here manifested."

It is decided by the proper officers of the Post Office Deparment, that letter postage is legally chargeable on packages having writing other than the simple address, on the outside. If payment is refused at the delivery office, he can be prosecuted for a fraud on the department, as an attempt to conceal the writing is necessary to constitute a fraud, as in the case of writing words or signs inside of a package of printed matter, which is a fraud under the law.

Mrs. Sarah E. Shaw has brought a suit against the Boston and Worcester Railroad Company, which was commenced on the 17th inst., in Boston, for damages to the amount of $25,000, for injuries received by coming in contact with a train of cars at Newton Lower Falls, in the night. Mrs. Shaw, with another lady and her husband, were riding in a sleigh on the road when the accident occurred. Mr. Shaw was killed; Mrs. Shaw was sadly injured, having had one arm amputated, and sustained other injuries.

THE NEW RUSSIAN MINISTER.—We are able to announce as certain, says the Tribune, the appointment of Count Alexander de Medem to succeed the deceased Mr. Bodisco as Russian Minister at Washington. Count Medem belongs to one of the most aristocratic families of Courtland. He is closely related to the Princess of Byron, who once reined in that province and is first-cousin to the celebrated Duchess de Dino, the wife of a nephew of Prince Tallyrand, who for more than twenty years presided in Paris and in London over the salons of that great diplomatic deceiver, and enjoyed his complete confidence. Medem is about 46 years old, completed his education at the German Universities, especially at Bonn; and his information is diversified and extensive. He is highly ambitious and well bred, and what is commonly called a high-toned aristocrat. The Count has been for nearly twenty years in the diplomatic career, having passed through all its inferior grades. He was for some time in the East, principally as Consul-General in Egypt. From thence, two years ago, he was sent as Minister to Brazil, a post requiring no great activity; but he profited by the occasion thus afforded to visit the West Indies, Mexico, Central and the whole of South America, even its interior. His health is, however, very delicate, and his long residence in the South may render it difficult for him to live in this country. His arrival here cannot be expected very soon, as it is impossible for him to embark on the English steamers plying between Rio Janeiro and the North, and therefore he must resort to a sailing vessel, and look out for a good opportunity.

BERKS COUNTY.—It is designed to erect a mammoth Anthracite Furnace in this county, at a point near where the Lebanon Valley Railroad crosses the Schuylkill. On Friday about 3 o'clock, a son of Mr. John Schaeffer, some 6 years of age, fell into the canal at the wharf of W. A. Well's Fire Brick Works, unobserved by any one, and was accidentally discovered standing upright in the water, facing the wall of the wharf. When taken out the vital spark had fled. The Press calls the election of VANCE as candidate for Mayor by the Democracy of Philadelphia, a "glorious triumph!"

☞ Mrs. Mowatt is going to play engagements at Cincinnati and Louisville, then in New York, closing her professional life in an engagement sometime in June.

☞ The city of Chicago has just decided by popular vote to have a tunnel constructed under the river there, to supersede the bridges at present used. The latter cost $12,000 to build, and the expense of repairs and tenders for 1853 was about $2000 for cash. It is thought that in ten years the tunnel will prove a saving of money to the city, besides abolishing the bridges.

☞ Moore's Invigorating Elixir or Cordial.—The earth's crust is a vast depository of remedies suitable to the diseases of the creatures that inhabit it; and science, industry, reflection, and experiment are continually introducing from this great remedial storehouse new agents for the amelioration of human suffering. The most powerful of these agents that has ever been applied for the mitigation of pain, the conservation of health, and the prolongation of life is the Asiatic herb which forms the basis of Dr. Moral's Invigorating Elixir or Cordial. This preparation, if not a universal panacea, certainly embraces within its province as a curative a greater number of complaints than have ever before been subdued, or even relieved, by a single medicine. It is applicable to all nervous diseases, and all disorders of the secretive organs. It literally renovates the powers of the stomach, and gives to every organ and every fluid necessary to digestion its full natural vigor, however the same may have been impaired by illness or indulgence. If the procreative function has been impaired, in either sex, a single course of this preparation will impart to the relaxed organization its full sexual vigor. Woman, the most fragile as well as the fairest portion of animated nature, will find this her surest reliance in all difficulties, radical or incidental, to which her structure is liable; while in cases of nervous head-ache, neuralgia, dyspepsia, nervous melancholy, hysteria, restlessness, nervous trembling, imbecil paralysis, sleeplessness, unnatural irritability, fainting fits, epilepsy, weakness of the back, general prostration palpitation of the heart, lassitude, mental indolence, &c. its effects are as certain and uniform as the results of a mathematical calculation.

The Cordial is put up, highly concentated, in pint bottles. Price three dollars per bottle, two for five dollars, six for twelve dollars.

Beautiful Sites for Country Homes.

THE undersigned offers for sale, on easy terms, FIFTY LOTS, well located and contracted for the erection of an ENTIRE SQUARE, on the bank of the Allegheny river, in the Fifth ward, and the city of Pittsburgh, between Juniata and Sandusky streets, (being fronts on Mary and Juniata Ann Avenues, and Hamilton and Fleming streets.) This square contains many Fruit Trees of the choicest kind, and commands a fine view of the Allegheny river, rendering necessary a ground. I am desirous of preserving this square as a whole, as it would afford one of the most charming and magnificent sites for a gentleman's summer residence, in the immediate vicinity of the two cities.

Also, about THIRTY ACRES OF GROUND, at the head of the Island, advantageously situated for manufacturing purposes.

The above property is situated in Duquesne borough, on the high and main bank of Herr's Island, and is reached by a very substantial Bridge of one span. For particulars apply at my residence, in Duquesne borough, on the main bank, fronting the head of Herr's Island, or of JOHN DUNLAP & CO., corner of Second and Market sts., Pittsburgh. apr17:tf WM. SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ NOTICE.—A meeting of Stockholders in the "Pittsburgh Gas Insurance Company," will be held at their Office, on THURSDAY, April 27th, 1854, at 7 o'clock, P. M., to act upon the Supplement to the Charter, as printed. C. A. COLTON, Secretary.

☞ HYDRAULIC CEMENT.—The undersigned have constantly on hand a large supply of Bosom's HYDRAULIC CEMENT, of warranted quality. This article is the best and cheapest material for CISTERNS; a single four inch course of brick, laid in and plastered with this CEMENT, will endure for ages; and even plastered on clay walls, in successive courses to the thickness of an inch, becomes in a few days so solid as to resist any ordinary degree of outside pressure, nor is the water in the least degree affected.

This CEMENT should be used for all underground, underwater, and exposed structures, for all important buildings, and for fine walls, coping walls, chimney tops, bridges, aqueducts, canal locks, and every species of brick and stone structure exposed to water, damp, or frost.
